BCR IN DARK ON CASH FLOW

VANCOUVER (CP) — R. D. Nelson, British Columbia Railway's chief financial officer, said Thursday that the railway is unable to tell where it makes or loses money.

Nelson blamed the railway's inability to provide the royal commission investigating its affairs with specific figures on the loss or profit of carload, passenger and trailer on flatcar services on a data-processing system that is full of irrelevant information.

"If you put garbage in, you get garbage out," he said.

Nelson, who assumed his position last July, said the financial and administrative department with a staff of 268 and $7 million budget is being reorganized. (See also Page 12).

"It is astonishing that this type of information would not be the first thing sought," said commission counsel Martin Taylor.

Nelson clarified statements made Wednesday by Mac Norris, B.C. Rail vice-president, in which he said the railway did not have an operating loss for the first quarter of 1977. The railway accumulated a $22 million operating loss in the three previous years.

The railway generated $22.7 million in revenue while expenses ran to $24.1 million during the first three months of the year leaving it with a deficit of $1.4 million, but Nelson said that if depreciation of $3.1 million was ignored, the railway generated $1.3 million in cash. He added that operating expenses were in the black only in March, 1977.

Meanwhile, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said despite reports of massive losses, construction on the B.C. Rail Dease Lake extension will not be restarted until the royal commission makes its recommendations.

Phillips said only history will tell if the decision was correct, but he said it has been made and that's that.

Contractors have told the commission $5 million could be lost by construction delays.

Phillips said that must be weighed against the $40 million to $50 million that could have been lost if construction continued.

WASH. LAW SPARKS WARNING

Laetrile Worthless: MD

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The president of the Victoria Medical Society said Thursday that moves to legalize laetrile in Washington state will inevitably be interpreted as endorsement of the so-called cancer drug.

But Dr. Norman Bailey said new laws don't change the fact laetrile is "utterly worthless" in treating cancer and he only hopes it will prove equally harmless to those who try it.

The substance, derived from apricot and other fruit pits, has been available in recent years from clinics in Mexico and Germany. People buying it are reported to have paid thousands of dollars for treatments the medical profession says do no good.

Federal laws in both Canada and the U.S. have kept laetrile out of both countries until now, when some states have been moving to legalize it.

In California, a bill to legalize it passed the state senate Thursday.

Supporters of the measure by Sen. William Campbell didn't endorse laetrile's curative powers but said the issue is freedom of choice.

"It's less harmful, for example, than tobacco, alcohol or junk food," said Sen. Arlen Gregoria. "The issue is . . . a paternalistic, patronizing, pervasive regulatory government."

Campbell's bill would allow a doctor to prescribe the drug as long as there is no representation that it would cure cancer.

But another senator took the same position Dr. Bailey voiced in Victoria Thursday.

"Many people would believe that since the legislation has legalized laetrile, it must work," said Sen. Bob Wilson.

". . . We're creating a false hope for people."

In Washington state, Gov. Dixy Lee Ray said she will probably sign the Laetrile bill which passed the state house Tuesday.

She added that she would need to get other opinions on the bill once it reached her desk but is inclined to sign it because it has not been proved that the substance has any harmful effects.

'Propaganda' Row Ends Postal Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — New post office contract talks were short-lived Thursday when the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) walked out of a bargaining session, saying the government is bypassing union executives and going directly to the members with "propaganda concerning negotiations."

Chief union negotiator Jean-Claude Parrot, vice-president of CUPW, said the bargaining session lasted an hour.

The union will not resume negotiations until the public service staff relations board rules on the union's right to distribute its own literature to mail sorters and postal clerks, Parrot said.

It was not known how long that could take.

"Today, the spokesman for the employer informed us that the employer would continue to distribute information concerning negotiations directly to our membership but would not allow the union's bulletins to be distributed because the post office premises are the property of the taxpayers."

Parrot said post office negotiators also told the union "that many of our demands are not negotiable."

"Given this attitude, we had no alternative but to leave the meeting this morning."

Technological change is a major source of contention, with CUPW demanding guarantees that its members will not be adversely affected by changes in the post office.

The union, which represents 23,000 inside workers, says it is not opposed to changes which will improve efficiency, but that its members must be protected.

Parrot said it is obvious the post office is not prepared to negotiate seriously.

CUPW submitted its proposals to the post office three weeks ago and the government has not yet formally responded.

CUPW wants the right to veto any technological changes unless agreement is reached between the two parties.

Mondale, Vorster At Odds

VIENNA (AP) — U.S. Vice-President Walter Mondale and South African Prime Minister John Vorster said today they had failed to agree on U.S. efforts to change South Africa's race segregation policies.

Mondale told a news conference that Vorster agreed during two days of talk here to help achieve black rule in South-West Africa and Rhodesia, but had stubbornly defended his government's policy of apartheid.

"We hope the South Africans will not rely on any illusions that the U.S. will in the end intervene to save South Africa from the policies it is pursuing," Mondale said, "for we will not do so."

Vorster, in a news conference immediately following Mondale's, said there is a "vital difference" in the U.S. and South African positions.

He claimed the United States wants to equate the position of the American negro with that of the black South African and said: "This is where the difference comes in."

Vorster said the black South Africans were never slaves and have never been deprived of their nationality. He claimed blacks in his country have their own government and the right to vote.

N-Truck In Smash, Road Closed

LONDON (AP) — A truck carrying a 15-ton container of nuclear fuel bound for the U.S. hit three other vehicles and overturned Thursday on a highway near Winchester in southern England, but the radioactive material did not spill, authorities reported.

Police said five persons were injured in the mishap.

A second accident involving a nuclear fuel container occurred 85 miles to the east Thursday. A specially-designed railroad car derailed in Gillingham. It was empty at the time.

The truck was carrying uranium hexafluoride to Southampton from Preston, Lancashire, for shipment to the U.S., the state-owned British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. said.

Police closed one mile of the road for three hours while fire chiefs determined that the 40-foot container had not leaked any of the material, which had been mined in the U.S. and purified in England.

Fire officials said it was the first accident of its kind in Britain.

A spokesman for the state-owned British Rail said the derailment in Gillingham was the second time in six weeks the same car had left the tracks at the same spot.

The spokesman said the 99-ton car and container, designed for transporting nuclear fuel and waste, derailed as the train moved slowly over a road crossing. He said no one was injured.

Though no harm came of it, the mishap, long feared by the nation's nuclearequipment industry, was expected to fuel the fire of opponents to nuclear power.

U.S. PRICES UP .8% IN MONTH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices in the U.S. jumped 0.8 per cent in April, the fourth straight month that food and energy costs have caused a strong inflationary surge, the U.S. labor department reported today.

The increase reflected an annual rate of 9.6 per cent, consistent with a trend that began in January.

Food prices soared 1.5 per cent, more than twice the March rate.

Other commodities rose 0.4 per cent and services climbed 0.8 per cent—exactly duplicating their performance in March.

Among April energy costs, fuel oil rose 0.4 per cent, coal was up 0.9 per cent and gasoline and motor oil prices jumped 0.6 per cent.

April's food price increase was smaller than the 2 per cent jump registered in February, when the U.S. was suffering the worst effects of the severe winter weather on southern farms.

Northern Carpenters Come First

EDMONTON (CP) — Residents of the Northwest Territories will get preferred hiring status for carpenters' jobs in the N.W.T. under a new collective "labor agreement announced today.

This stipulation is part of the contract reached between the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Local 1325 based in Edmonton, and the Alberta Construction Labor Relations Association, representing the contractors.

"The agreement recognizes the needs of the Territories' residents and the special problems of the construction industry" in the N.W.T., said A. K. McCagherty, chairman of the contractors' association.

He said the N.W.T. government is conducting a carpenters' training program to supply a pool of local workers for the construction industry.

Bill Mackenzie, business representative for the local, representing 2,800 carpenters working in northern Alberta, said his union will set up an office and hiring hall in Yellowknife.

U.S. Curbs Arms Sales To 'Just Close Friends'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter is making a fundamental change in U.S. arms sales — the "burden of persuasion" henceforth will be upon those favoring the sale instead of opponents to the transaction.

The United States will limit future conventional arms sales to "our close friends" and other nations necessary to U.S. global security, Carter said Thursday.

Israel will be exempted from the new limits, Carter explained.

The United States, he said, will "remain faithful to our treaty obligations, and will honor our historic responsibilities to assure the security of the state of Israel."

From now on, Carter said arms sales will be made only to nations with which the United States has major defence treaties, including Japan, Australia, New Zealand and members of NATO.

Only "extraordinary circumstances" will alter that stand, he said.

The United States now has $32 billion in arms sales commitments pending, which will take several years to fulfill, and those commitments will be honored.

But Carter said he plans to reduce sales as quickly as possible.

"Total arms sales in recent years have risen to over $20 billion, and the United States accounts for more than one half of this amount," he said.

Seniors Win Bus-Ferry Battle

Pacific Stage Lines has decided to quit arguing and give the senior citizens the free ferry ride advertised by the provincial government.

A company spokesman said the rate from Victoria to Vancouver will fall to $2.75 on June 1, from the present level of $3.50.

The rates for senior citizens are good from Monday to Thursday only. On other days they pay the full rate of $6.25, going to $5.75 on June 1.

The senior citizen rate has been a hot issue for months in Victoria because the promised free ride on the ferry has not been delivered. This is because the ferry charges the bus line for putting the vehicle aboard and this extra cost was passed along to the bus passengers, including the senior citizens.

This created a financial formula that became so complex that even Pacific Stage Lines officials on occasion confessed they couldn't work it out.

"Anyway, we are tired of arguing and we are going to give the senior citizen a free ride on the ferry starting June 1," a PSL spokesman said.

"That means $3 off the basic rate."

So the new cost for senior citizens is $2.75 effective June 1, which is $3 less than the basic $5.75 rate. (The ferry ride will cost $3, down from $4, effective June 1.

In the event the senior citizen drives to Swartz Bay and walks on the ferry, taking the bus from Tsawwassen to Vancouver, he will pay $1.70. The former rate was $1.30.

However, on the return trip, when he takes the bus from the Vancouver depot to Tsawassen the rate will again be $1.70. The old rate was $2.60.

Bus company officials have spent almost a year trying to explain the difference in the present rates and they have decided they would rather equalize them than continue the debate.

(For those who care, the difference is due to the fact the bus company was charged for driving on to the ferry but not for driving off. The different rates made sense to an accountant but were bewildering to the customers).

In general, the senior citizen can expect to pay the basic rate minus $3, except on Friday, Saturday or Sunday when he pays the full amount.

Publisher Stuart Underhill has announced the appointment of Barbara McLintock as editor of the Victoria Times.

McLintock, 26, takes over responsibility for the Times' editorial page and for enunciation of Times' editorial policy from George R. Oake, who has accepted a position as political writer with Southam News Services in Ottawa. The change is effective June 13.

A native of Winnipeg and graduate in arts from the University of Winnipeg, McLintock began her newspaper career with The Daily Colonist in 1970, moving to the Vancouver Province two years later. FERRY EXPERT HIRED BY B.C.

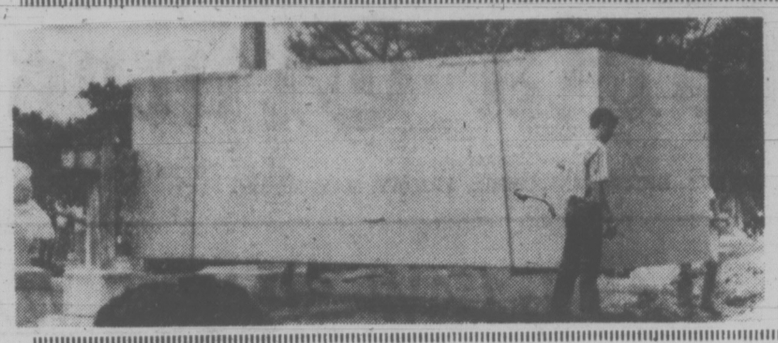
Roy Illing currently has responsibility for the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, the National Harbors Board and the Canadian Coast Guard.

Energy Minister Jack Davis announced the appointment today and said Illing will take over his new duties June 1. He replaces Charles Dalfen, who left in April, 1976.

Davis said Illing is very knowledgeable in the area of ferry operations as he was responsible for the organization of the East Coast ferry system.



Down the Last Straight . . .

As 300 of the curious watched, a construction crew and two cement trucks helped a local funeral parlor carry out the odd burial wish of the 37-year-old Beverly Hills, Calf., oil heiress.

A funeral home had placed Mrs. West's body and her 1964 Ferrari inside a large gray crate, away from public view. When it came time for interment, a large yellow crane lowered the crate into the ground next to her late husband, Texaa rancher-oilman Ike West Jr.

Laetrile 'Useless'

The U.S food and drug administration, besides saying laetrile is useless as a cancer cure, contends it can cause harm by lulling patients into a false sense of security so that they do not seek other treatments.

The legislation in Washington state has been sent to the senate for action on amendments and concurrence there is expected.

It would exclude administration of laetrile as grounds for discipline of medical professionals, would require the state board of pharmacy to establish procedures for testing and certification and would allow its sale.

Federal laws in the U.S. prohibiting distribution would require manufacture to be within the state.

In Victoria, Bailey said the developments "appear to be a human attempt to allow cancer sufferers to clutch at straws without the expense of leaving home to find (laetrile) or the danger of falling into the hands of charlatans.

"Legislation is powerless to make laetrile other than what it is," he said, "namely useless and utterly worthless except to those who make it.

"It is to be hoped that it is equally as harmless as it is useless."

NEW LEADER of Greater Victoria's 1,400 teachers is Syd Langhelt who will take a year's leave of absence from his Grade 3 teaching job at Margaret Jenkins School. Restoration 'A Ripoff'?

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MP Tom Cossitt (Leeds) called Thursday for a Parliamentary investigation into what he described as apparent misuse of public money in a restoration project in the city's historic market area.

He asked in the Commons if the government paid for $50,000 worth of French wine ordered by developers of the project.

He also asked if the government bought suits of armor in England to decorate the interior of the stone building — an old cheese factory — currently being transformed into a theatre, pub and restaurant by private enterpreneurs.

Excited Crowd Shoves Queen

DUNDEE, Scotland (AP) — A royal visit here touched off hysteria Thursday as the Queen was surrounded by a shoving, shouting mob.

Police said the crowd of 10,000 in Camperdown Park got out of control, tramped down rope barriers and separated the Queen and Prince Philip.

The prince tried to get to his wife but was cut off by the crowd around her. Police said the crowd around the prince was so excited they seemed not to notice Philip was in their midst.

The said women and children were shrieking "I've touched the Queen."

The Queen and the prince appeared to be very tense when police officers finally got them together and linked arms to protect them, police said. The royal couple was helped to their car and the visit was cut short.

John Little, chief constable of Tayside which covers Dundee, was seen pushing aside a woman with a camera so that Lady Airlie, the Queen's lady-in-waiting, could get into her car.

There was no report of any injuries in the stampede, although town clerk Gordon Watson, who spent a year organizing the royal visit, said he was kicked and shoved.

Thursday was the third day of the silver jubilee royal visit to Scotland marking the Queen's 25 years on the throne.

The British Broadcasting Corp. reported the Queen was "greatly pleased and very impressed by the size of the crowds turning out to see her and the hours many people spent waiting along the royal route."

SHOWING THE FLAG NOT DIPLOMATIC

STOWE, Vt. (UPI) — The dispute over Quebec separatism spilled into Vermont today, prompting some hasty international diplomacy by officials of a local bank.

A donor recently gave the Mountain Trust Co. a matched set of U.S. and Canadian flags, and for the past week, the Stars and Stripes and the Maple Leaf flew side by side in the mountain breeze.

But employees reporting for work this morning found someone had snatched the Canadian flag and replaced it with the Quebec provincial banner.

Reluctant to offend either side in the controversy over Quebec separatism, the bank chose a course of neutrality.

ASSAULT PLANNED ON SMALLPOX BY W.H.O.

GENEVA (AP) — The World Health Organization has asked for new funds and vaccines to fight a resurgence of smallpox six months after it was believed nearing extinction.

A WHO report to the 150-country group's annual meeting said it needed at least another $3.8 million to finance search and containment operations.

The report also called on member governments to continue donating smallpox vaccines to bring WHO stocks of emergency reserves to a level allowing vaccination of 200 to 300 million people. Current reserves are only enough to vaccinate 80 million people.

Last August seven villagers in a remote area of Ethiopia were the last known cases of the disease on the globe and the organization's smallpox eradication campaign appeared headed for final victory. In 1967 at the start of the campaign about 20-30 million people were infected and about three million died in 43 Latin America, African and Asian countries.

Anti-Trident Base

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Pacific Life Community has found a house in Port Orchard, Wash., which it can use as a training centre this summer for demonstrations against the Trident nuclear submarine base at Bangor, Jim Douglass, a leader of the pacifist group, said Thursday.

the weather

Skies over the B.C. Interior were mainly clear overnight while farther west cloud had spread to the B.C. coast by morning. This cloud shield will gradually spread to the Interior this evening. The disturbance responsible for this could and the accompanying precipitation is the forerunner of a series of Pacific disturbances being ferried to the west coast by strong westerly winds aloft during the next few days. As is usual under these conditions coastal areas will get recurrent periods of showers. Elsewhere showers will dominate the Interior with the exception of Thompson-Okanagan where frequent sunny breaks amongst afternoon and evening showers will be the trend. Temperatures will also be a few degrees below seasonal normal during this period.

North America Out In Leyland Bribes

LONDON (Reuter) — The Daily Mail says today it has documents showing that the giant British Leyland car firm paid out millions of pounds in "slush money" in every continent except North America.

But Lord Ryder, head of the National Enterprise Board (NEB), the government agency which has a 95-percent stake in Leyland, denounced as a forgery a letter that formed the centrepiece of The Mail's story and which he is alleged to have written.

Lord Ryder, NEB board chairman, is quoted by The Daily Express as saying: "There is no question of this letter being genuine. It will be the easiest thing in the world to prove it is a forgery."

In the letter Lord Ryder, who has been called home from vacation on the Greek island of Corfu, is alleged to have referred to "special account arrangements"—which The Mail says meant bribes to secure foreign orders.

The newspaper published a photocopy of the letter today along with other documents that The Mail says show that the state-controlled Leyland firm, Britain's largest exporter, made payoffs to win overseas business.

The Mail says that of £11,327,700 (about $19,250,000) paid from the slush fund in the financial year 1975-76, more than £7 million ($11,900,000) went to the Middle East while Africa got £1,885,200 (about $3,105,000) and the Far East £1,362,000 (about $2,316,000).

The key letter, allegedly from Lord Ryder to Leyland chief executive Alex Park, said that Industry Secretary Eric Varley had "nodded through" proposals for handling the "special account arrangements."

But Varley told Parliament Thursday: "I have not nodded anything through."

So far, Leyland has neither confirmed nor denied the bribery claims, saying it must first study the allegations.

The Mail says that this year's projected bill for "special payments" will be £25 million ($42.5 million). It said some recipients collected the money in suitcases from Leyland factories in Britain.

Members of the country's business community have said that goodwill payments are a feature in the battle for sales in world markets.

Sir Fred Catherwood, who heads the government's Overseas Trade Board, said: "The area in which the international company can do business today without extra-contractual payments is shrinking fast."

B.C. TORIES RAP STRAITS TANKERS

OTTAWA (CP) — British Columbia MPs criticized the government Thursday for permitting shipment of Alaskan oil to the U.S. through the Juan de Fuca Strait off the B.C. coast without adequate pollution agreements between the two governments.

The shipments are scheduled to begin in July.

Robert Wenman (PC — Fraser Valley West) demanded an amendment to the Canada Shipping Act to provide a temporary source of compensation for potential victims of oil pollution.

Donald Munro (PC — Esquimalt-Saanich) asked the government to ensure that Canadians would have access to a compensation fund to be established in the U.S. through legislation which has not passed in Congress.

He said no Canadian legislation to provide a compensation fund is currently contemplated although the government has had reservations about the potential pollution hazard for a long time.

Uganda Bar Urged During Games

OTTAWA (CP) — Edmonton MP Douglas Roche said Thursday that Uganda should be excluded from the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton.

But Allan MacEachen, acting external affairs minister, said keeping a Commonwealth member from the Games may lead others to withdraw and cause collapse of the Games.

The government already is working to placate African countries who object to the planned presence at the Games of New Zealand, which maintains sporting links with South Africa.

Roche (PC — Edmonton-Strathcona) said in the Commons that stronger measures are needed to express Canadian outrage at systematic human rights violations in Uganda.

The International Commission of Jurists reported Wednesday that at least 100,000 Ugandans have been killed during President Idi Amin's six-year rule, he said.

Roche also urged that Amin be barred from the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference next month in London.

A report from London Thursday quoted government sources as saying that Amin will not be allowed to attend the conference. The report said that a final decision on Amin's attendance was expected soon.

$319 Million Backed In Export Guarantee

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Export Development Corporation said Thursday it has approved credits, insurance, long-term loans and investment guarantees totalling $319.6 million to support the export sale of more than $385.2 million worth of Canadian goods and services to seven countries.

The countries involved are Algeria, Gabon, Libya, the Republic of Korea, Poland, Turkey and Venezuela.

Company president John A. MacDonald told a press conference that $286 million had been approved for loans, $22.41 million for insurance and $1.65 million for investment guarantees.

Sales are expected to generate about 10,400 man-years of employment for Canadian workers, he said, as well as involve more than 1,525 large and small sub-supplies.

Macdonald said agreements involve such goods and services as asbestos, aluminum, log skidders, forming systems. Also included are a battery plant, a forest product project, telecommunications equipment, service warehouses and a liquified gas plant.

THIRD MYSTERY ILLNESS STRIKES CRUISE SHIP

ATLANTA (AP) — The Sitmar cruise ship Fairsea headed for St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands on Thursday with about 270 of its 900 passengers suffering an unidentified illness, the Centre for Disease Control (CDC) said.

This is the third recent cruise where passengers and crew aboard the Fairsea have become ill with an unidentified malady, the CDC said.

A spokesman for Sitmar said the vessel will leave on another two-week cruise from San Juan on Saturday but the 900 persons who have booked passage will be told of the present situation.

A telegram from J. P. Bland, president of Sitmar, was sent Thursday to about 300 travel agents who booked the passengers.

"For the past month, an unusual number of passengers aboard the TSS Fairsea have experienced symptoms of a mild gastrointestinal illness," the telegram says in part.

"Since the possibility exists that a similar situation may recur on your forthcoming cruise, both Sitmar and the U.S. Public Health Service agree that you should be aware of the facts, as we know them, before you leave home."

Dr. Robert Gunn of the CDC said a report from an epidemiologist aboard the ship indicates that about 270 passengers and about 14 of the 450 crew have become ill. None has been sent to hospital and none has required treatment with antibiotics.

Hard To Swallow

On principle alone, it is difficult to accept the 15 per cent rate increase just granted B.C. Telephone Co. by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission. Like some 600 citizens who complained to the CRTC at hearings in Vancouver seven weeks ago, we object to paying an increase double what we are allowed in wage hikes under the federal anti-inflation program. And like another 600 protesters who filed objections, we have other reservations, such as pouring more funds into a grossly inefficient but nonetheless very necessary enterprise. But more than this, we do not like to see British Columbians and a federal regulatory agency blackmailed into supporting a poorly managed private company driven principally by the profit motive.

In making its rate increase application to the CRTC, B.C. Tel pleaded outright poverty. The company, the commission heard, has the worst debt-equity position — debts equalling 62 per cent of total worth — of any phone company in Canada. The firm has borrowed money to an extent which "imperils its financial integrity." Despite this overextension, B.C. Tel has at the same time committed itself to a $280 million capital construction program for 1977. The expenditure cannot be cut without the firm suffering severe penalties and it cannot go ahead without a rate boost to instill investor confidence.

In short, B.C. Tel told the commission to either grant the application or watch the telephone system in British Columbia collapse. Christopher Johnston, CRTC general counsel, summed it up: "You make it very difficult for a regulatory body to make a decision because you have already committed so much money . . ." Replied a B.C. Tel officer: "That's right, in a practical sense." Caught between a rock and a hard place, the commission had little choice but to grant the increase.

It is little consolation that in doing so the CRTC recognized the need for immediate improvements to the B.C. Tel operations, especially in repairs. Service similar to that provided by Bell Canada in Ontario and Quebec is the least we should expect in B.C. What is reprehensible is that we should have to bail out an overextended, debt-ridden private company in order to receive an essential service. If anyone should take the rap for B.C. Tel's bizarre business management, it should be General Telephone and Electronics Corp. of New York, the parent company which takes half of B.C. Tel's net income. If this cannot be done, then more direct government control of B.C. Tel may be necessary to ensure we receive the service we deserve at a reasonable price.

The heart of the matter.

. . . But the Patient Died

Forests Minister Tom Waterland has brought a new seaminess to his Fraser Canyon pesticide spraying program by considering the use of private security guards to prevent protesters from interfering. It is bad enough that the minister has opted to dismiss the concerns of the B.C. Medical Association, the area health officer, the labor movement, environmentalists and local residents. But there is something just a little grimy and sinister about going outside regular security channels to hire rent-a-cops to defend the unpopular project. It reminds us of the paramilitary irregulars hired by sweatshop bosses to keep the workers in line.

In any case, whether the minister employs the RCMP, Pinkerton guards or the Dirty Dozen to support his assault on the spruce budworm, he is determined to go ahead with this plan of doubtful value and potentially dangerous consequences. Sadly, his latest defence of the scheme — presumably well-considered — only confirms our previous conviction that Waterland suffers from tunnel vision when it comes to the economics of forestry.

In a guest editorial submitted to The Times under the minister's name, Waterland says it is time to call a spade a spade. No more "gobblygook," he says. "When your heart is threatened your body is threatened. There's no guesswork in what you should do. You'd do everything possible to save yourself. The action you would take would undoubtedly leave some scars. If it was open heart surgery the scar would be a big one. But with proper care and attention it would heal."

The heart in this clever analogy is the B.C. forest. According to Waterland, it is faltering and drastic surgery is necessary. Scars will be left, but spraying the budworm — and everything else in the 52,000 acre area — is "the most effective and efficient way of arresting the problem."

No talk about the potential dangers to the health of people or the survival of the Fraser Canyon eco-system. Once again, the minister is concerned with an "effective and efficient" way to preserve timber for the forest companies. Perhaps someone should point out to the minister that if the forests are the heart of this province then the organs served by the heart are the people of this province. And a skilled physician does not destroy the rest of the body in order to save the heart alone.

FRED CLEVERLEY

Sunday Closing Stirs Row

WINNIPEG — Manitoba's capital city may soon become one of the few places in North America where it is virtually impossible to buy groceries on a Sunday. Winnipeggers will be able to bet on Sunday horse races, go to movies, and drink liquor with their restaurant meals, but when it comes to groceries, finding a quart of milk may be something akin to buying a bottle of liquor before the days of enlightened liquor laws.

The situation won't be quite that simplistic, but for most intents Winnipeggers who want to shop for groceries on Sundays will have to really know their city.

The new law has already passed second reading — approval in principle — in the Manitoba legislature, and is the outcome of a supermarket war that waged on and off during the past year. Under the new law, grocery stores employing more than three people will be able to remain open six days a week, but will be forced to close either Saturday or Sunday.

Although the bill is well through the legislative process, the controversy it is expected to generate became plainly visible, when both Winnipeg newspapers carried full page advertisement asking "Why is the Manitoba Government proposing to put the small, Manitoba-owned grocery stores out of business?"

Ads Complain

The advertisements carried cartoons showing the huge foot of Labor Minister A. R. Paulley crushing a small store, one showing a store chained under "Manitoba's padlock law" and one portraying the big chain stores as a Goliath, and carrying the caption "The retail clerks union thinks the fight would be fairer if the Manitoba Government took away the little guy's sling."

Although the advertisements were placed by a group calling themselves the "Victims of Bill 18" union spokesmen immediately charged that the name was a front for the big chains, who want no restrictions.

Sunday closing has not been an issue in Manitoba for more than 10 years, when the city's first shopping mall fought an earlier closing law to a standstill.

But Winnipeg, like most North American cities, has lost its neighborhood "mom and pop" stores. They have been gobbled up by the larger, chain "convenience" stores which are often really the property of food wholesalers.

Although these stores were open 24 hours a day, most charged prices sufficiently higher than the chains to keep their real hours of business confined to those times when the chains were closed.

Caught in the middle were the medium sized grocery stores, those employing 20 people or less. Basically neighborhood stores, they found it increasingly difficult to compete against the 24-hour variety.

. . . offers compromise

This past year a few of these medium stores began remaining open on Sundays. This in turn affected the returns of the chains, and for a few weeks Winnipeg had a wide-open Sunday grocery shopping war on its hands.

Church groups complained. The owners of the small stores, whose time advantage had been broken, also complained, but the biggest complaint came from the Retail Clerks Union. Winnipeg open-line radio shows were filled with little else for days on end.

Finally, Labor Minister Paulley negotiated a truce, in which the chain stores agreed to remain closed on Sunday if the Labor Minister agreed to introduce legislation at the next session making the situation more fair for everyone.

Here Paulley ran into a problem. He was hesitant to legislate a complete Sunday closing because of the inconvenience it would cause and because it would likely, as happened with the ealier closing bylaw, be thrown out by the courts.

The legislation now being debated is a compromise. It is not likely to please the chains, unless they can come to some sort of a "gentlemen's agreement" concerning which day — Saturday or Sunday — they will close. It will not please at all those stores who still want the seven day opening, and the unions will probably be upset because they won't have a voice in deciding just which day their particular employer will choose to remain open.

The legislation will deepen the already wide split between urban and rural Manitoba. People in rural areas are expected to plump for Sunday closing, since most small towns in the province already close Mondays in any event.

Union Accused

The bill has already produced a split in the government ranks. Rev. Donald Malowinski, a Polish National Catholic priest and government member in the house, says he will go along with the legislation only if it is amended to force the large chains all to close on Sunday.

The full-page advertisements accused the president and chief executive officer of the Retail Clerks Union of turning his back on the workers who were not organized, and helping to engineer a bill which would get both what the union and the big chains wanted, the closing of the smaller, independent stores which have no unionized employees.

But imagine the frustration of a Manitoban, once the new law has been passed, after losing a few hundred at the race track, eating a meal with liquor, getting his boat or car repaired, attending an X-rated movie, not being able to buy a bottle of milk or a loaf of bread because it happens to be Sunday?

W.A. WILSON

Foreign Policy Goals Met

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau can fairly claim consistency in the foreign policy objectives he has pursued during his period of power and last week in London he felt satisfied that he was seeing their main themes come to fruition.

These themes are familiar to Canadians separately but they may not always be seen in combination as the basic elements of the country's foreign policy during the last six or seven years. The principal objectives which he has sought are:

—Economic cooperation, with deliberate attemps to widen this country's trading base beyond the traditional commitment to American and British markets;

—Improved international cooperation to reduce the dangers of nucelar proliferation, a field in which Canada has become the hard-liner among the supplier nations;

—Improved cooperation among the industrialized democracies to meet the critical needs of the under-developed Third World, a goal that will be severely tested, perhaps decisively at the end of the month at the final meeting fo the conference on international economic cooperation, which is more specialized than the name indicates because it is there that the main North-South dialogue is being conducted.

Uncertainty Increased

Inter-woven with these main themes of his foreign policy are related ones, particularly on the structural nature of many current difficulties, which have also been dominant in Trudeau's domestic approaches. There is a kinship between much that the prime minister has been saying aboard since the beginning of the 1970s and the controversial broadcasts at home with which he ushered in 1976. Those broadcasts, it seems to me, stirred up a hornets' nest not so much because of the content but because they possessed a musing quality that had the unintentional effect of increasing uncertainties and uneasiness at a time when people generally were seeking re-assurance and certainty.

There will probably be dispute over the prime minister's London statements that some of the foreign policy efforts are now coming to fruition but that is not an unreasonable claim. There are signs that this is in fact happening, although the divisions between the nuclear suppliers is very deep since fundamentally opposed views of some problems exist in the opposing democratic camps.

In the controversies that Trudeau arouses one important aspect of his character seems to escape notice. He is a man who clearly takes himself and his work very seriously, for all the criticisms that the energy he applies to it is sporadic. He is not, however, a self-important man and never a pompous one. So the claims he made in London for the progress he sees in his main policy thrusts were modestly stated.

"I must say to a modest degree the . . . summit and NATO has been very rewarding for the action we have been pursuing for several years . . . In the early 70s I was putting very great accent on the need for international cooperation not only in the economy, which is well known and understood, but in such areas as environmental protection with particular emphasis on the nature of nuclear proliferation . . .

Two-Month Study

"The main theme of my meetings with every leader was the danger of nuclear proliferation . . . This has now come to fruition. I do not claim that it has been my action alone or even that I have had great influence but certainly the theme that we have been pursuing came to a climax on Saturday and Sunday . . ."

The disagreement that still separates the nuclear suppliers involves difficult scientific and engineering judgments related to the nuclear fuel cycle. The specific question is the degree of danger involved in reprocessing fuel from reactors, a process that produces plutonium. It can only be used in fast breeder reactors, which are one of the few ways of actually using up some plutonium, or in bombs.

West Germany is convinced, with French support, that the 15 or so "threshhold nations", which could make bombs, possess the abilities and resources to do so if they wish, whether or not any other country sells them reprocessing equipment. Canada is the leading hold-out on the other side, considering that provision of reprocessing equipment simply makes the task of a would-be bomb maker easier and that this is to be avoided. It is almost impossible for even a well-informed layman to reach a final conclusion and the leaders at the summit faced this problem.

That is why they decided upon the two-month study by experts in an attempt to produce some agreed conclusions on the question. But that in itself is a considerable step forward from the unresolved discord that had marked the issue up until then, discord that was close to producing some real animosity between otherwise friendly and cooperative countries.

It would be impossible to say how much Trudeau contributed to this but certainly he pressed his policy assiduously and Canada's action in cutting India off from nuclear cooperation after its explosion was a uniquely tough action among the group. Trudeau is convinced that while Canada's influence, as a middle power, is necessarily limited the country nonetheless does possess international muscle when it is properly applied.

Like other heads of governmernt, Trudeau acts as his own foreign minister on the issues that are most important to him, leaving the external affairs department and diplomatic service with a support role. He often acts directly, either in person or through his foreign policy adviser, Ivan Head. Curiously, there has been little criticism of Trudeau for this approach but a good deal aimed at Head.

One of those who did much to smooth out the working relationships was E. A. Ritchie, while he was under-secretary for external affairs. He was emphatic that the approach was legitimate, that Head plays a useful and important role and would say freely that "I have a lot of time for Ivan."

Impishness Remains

The criticism often aimed at Head, however, obviously has its roots not in his own actions and approaches but in the prime minister's role in foreign policy. His aide appears to be a surrogate target for men who feel slighted by the Trudeau methods. That is probably a commonplace situation in the countries where the head of government is active in foreign policy.

Henry Kissinger, for instance, was not loved in the U.S. state department when, as head of the National Security Council he played a competing foreign role — a problem President Nixon resolved by appointing him secretary of state. Head is not Dr. Kissinger but it is evident that the prime minister finds him an aide of great value.

The prime minister no longer slides down bannisters at Lancaster House, as he did on his first official trip to London, but an element of impishness remains. Not a pompous man himself, he does not react well to stuffiness. Hence the pirouette at Buckingham Palace, probably not a politically wise gesture but engaging nonetheless.

(Last in a series of three articles on the Trudeau foreign policy efforts.)

Friendly Display

A Reader's Digest item two years ago told of long lines of motorists stranded on Vancouver Island by ferry strike, in August 1973, and how they were befriended by sympathetic residents of the town of Sidney, B.C.

During the 1974 U.S. gas shortage, a traveler from Sidney ran out of gas in Oregon. The service station attendant was about to dismiss him when he saw the B.C. license plates. "Do you know the town of Sidney:" he asked "I live there," said the traveler. "Then you just come with me," said the garageman, and took him to his bulk-filling plant where he made sure that ten gallons of the best went into the Canadian's tank. "I was in that lineup at Sidney during the ferry strike," he said. "No Sidney man is going away from my station with an empty tank!"

Our ferry problems may be serious, but this one display of friendly hands across the line proves that some people can still remember kindness and return it. — M. Wright, Victoria.

Monstrous Calumny

Tut, tut my dear Mr. Wilson. The PQ election and similar passing trivia may as you say, change the nation a trifle but nothing will ever change the superb creations of Conan Doyle. That most awesome canine savage, the Hound of the Baskervilles, never in the whole of its chronicled history emitted such a frivolous, degrading, egalitarian, socialist-Marxian piece of canine speech that you refer to as 'a bark'. The Hound uttered only in the mellifluous, euphonic and melancholy diction of the nobility of the doggy world — it bayed, likened in the author's colourful simile to the booming of the bitterns in the Great Grimpen Mire, wherein the villanous animal was chained when not in mortal pursuit of the incumbent Baskerville. May Lucifer, your editor, and the runners of Baker Street forgive this monstrous calumny of one of the most illustrious fictional criminals of the animal underworld.

The provincial government announces a new policy that will result in the loss of hundreds of Victoria jobs and there is nary a whimper from city council and other members of the business community.

Under the direction of the Hon. Alex Fraser, the department of public works is being disbanded to be replaced by the B.C. Building Corporation. Work now done by the DPW will be given to private consulting, engineering and architectural firms, most of which are based in Vancouver. The minister has pledged that the 800 employees, many of them Victoria based, made redundant by this decision will not be laid off but will be fitted into other government departments.

Since it would be churlish to suggest that the decision to dismember the DPW was reached in order to pay off large campaign contributions from the private firms who stand to profit from the decision, one can only presume that the government has taken this action for economy's sake. Therefore we cannot expect the government to create 800 new positions in other departments. Apparently the Minister is confident that hundreds of positions which already exist will soon become vacant so that DPW employees can be neatly shuffled into them. But even in the unlikely event that the Minister does accomplish this feat of legerdemain, it will still mean that Victoria's economy will suffer the net loss of hundreds of jobs.

Perhaps, when the changeover from DPW to BCBC is complete and the last of several hundred families is leaving Victoria in search of work, City Council will gather at Swartz Bay, sing a few bars of "So long, it's been good to know you" and then regroup at city hall to form a committee, to set a budget, to select a consultant, to study the problem of Victoria's flagging economy. — Terry Reksten, 2636 Lincoln Road.

russell baker

The latest aberration in the American pursuit of happiness is the feelgood movement. The country is swarming with swamis from Asia, quacks from California and evangelists of sexual joy, narcotic paradise, communal contentment and dining ecstasy. Psychologists who can whip off a quick volume of tips on how to feel good 24 hours a day adorn the best-seller lists. In the warm baths surrounding Disneyland West, gurus of feel-good preside over group gropes aimed at squeezing the nasty wrinkles out of psyches yearning for a peace ineffable.

Do Americans really feel as rotten as the boom in the feel-good business suggests? I doubt it. My reservations may, of course, reflect my own biased suspicions of the feel-good movement. The truth is that I don't feel good most of the time and don't want to.

Moreover, I do not comprehend why anyone else should want to. I know a few rare souls who feel good as much as 20 per cent of the day, and while it does not seem to make them unhappy, it does make their company somewhat trying by constantly reminding you that you cannot feel as good as they do.

This is not to be held against them. They can no more help feeling good for longer periods than the average person than Rubinstein can help excelling at the piano. It is a matter of genes. They were born to feel good. Most people are not.

It is perfectly normal not to feel good. This does not mean it is normal to feel rotten all the time, or even to feel bad too steadily. All things in moderation, said the Greeks, and that is the rule for feeling good and bad. A person who feels bad with reasonable regularity will enjoy the occasional period of feeling good far more than somebody who feels good so often that he is bored by it.

My misgivings about feel-goodness are heightened by the origins of its preachers. The chief exponents of psychic feelgood tend to come from Asia, California and the psychological sciences, no one of which has an impressive record at making people feel good.

In Asia nobody has felt good for centuries. As Edith Hamilton noted, Asian religions have always urged people not to spend themselves fretting on the problems of this world for the obvious reason that the Asian world has mostly been a world of misery. As for California, on the other hand, while almost everybody claims to feel good about having outdoor tennis 12 months per annum, they also seem to spend most of their lives in automobiles. It is hard to believe anybody can really feel good about having hands permanently warped into the shape of steering-wheel claws.

As for what psychologists can teach the masses about feeling good, suffice it to say that their principal contribution to society so far has been the creation of those testing systems used by corporations, government and universities to dredge out the individual's most interesting secrets for use as bludgeons against him.

If I wanted to feel good, Asia, California and psychologists would stay at the bottom of my list of tutors. It is hard to imagine any trio more likely to spoil a pleasant evening. When we toss in the apostles of hedonism — the champions of utter consumption, the proconsuls of total sexual wingding — we have a stew to turn Christmas at Dingley Dell into a party that would make even a sociologist beg for mercy.

What the entire gang has in common is a faith in the individual servicing himself first. In his essay "The Me Generation," Tom Wolfe observes that feelgoodism rests on an obsessive passion for No. 1, with each acolyte assuming that the world begins with his birth, ends with his death and can be endured only by dwelling in the nucleus of his own ego, pondering and pandering to his Me.

The feelgoodists are heretics who have turned the pursuit of happiness into a search for the endless smile, the total serenity, the complete fulfillment of self, the supreme orgasm and the perfect doughnut. Society becomes a service station to supply fuel and spark plugs for easy motoring from womb to tomb.

Just thinking about it makes you feel bad. Poor Jefferson would have felt terrible had he suspected that the pursuit of happiness would come to this. I feel rather bad myself, but later I shall feel good for a while. Provided I don't try too hard.

Africans Here First Before Columbus?

By HOLLIE WEST
Washington Post

Anthropologist-linguist Ivan Van Sertima has set ablaze a mini-controversy with his thesis that Africans set foot upon — and made significant cultural impact on — the New World 22 centuries before Columbus sailed into the West Indies.

In his book, They Came Before Columbus, Van Sertima, a Rutgers professor, says that American influences can be found in an array of cultural similarities between Africa and the ancient Americas — pyramid construction, the use of boat litters, the parasol, the plumed serpent motif, bronze-casting techniques.

He also points to the Negroid features of giant stone heads in Mexico, four of which have been radio carbon dated at 914 B.C.

But, in his review in the March 13 issue of The New York Times Book Review, Glyn Daniel, archeology professor at Cambridge University, called the book "ignorant rubbish" and described Van Sertima as one of several "deluded scholars."

Daniel's review provoked a barrage of letters — from scholars and laypersons — defending Van Sertima. The Book Review received about 70 letters, the most reader reaction it's had on an issue since a reviewer attacked Robert Frost several years ago.

'A Sea of Abuse'

The book is a special May selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club and Random House is about to publish a second printing.

Van Sertima, 42, in Washington recently for the third annual black writers conference sponsored by Howard University, said the letters exposed Daniel as "a man impervious to original thought, who will not even do honest battle with ideas he contends but tries to drown out in a sea of vituperation and abuse."

The professor said he was intrigued but skeptical when he first encountered the idea of ancient African contact with the Americas.

"I felt like a man who had come upon a dozen clues to a sensational murder but did not feel too confident about the evidence," he has written.

The occasion was his first visit to the United States from Britain, where he was working in 1970. In the library of a Princeton professor, he came across three volumes, Africa and the Discovery of America, written by a Harvard linquist, Leo Weiner, and published more than 50 years ago. The books showed an African and Arabic influence on medieval Mexican and South American languages prior to European contact.

2,000 Years Before

Reading these volumes sparked his interest in carrying further what Weiner, with his lack of knowledge about anthropology and archeology, had only suggested: the idea that Africans came to the Americas — and stayed — 2,000 years before Columbus.

Later that year he returned to the U.S. to teach at Rutgers. He was asked to write a magazine piece simplifying and summarizing Weiner. On the day he submitted his piece, he learned about Alexander von Wuthenau, an art historian who had excavated a large number of Negroid heads in clay, gold copper and coral sculpted by pre-Columbian American artists.

Van Sertima was convinced there was a connection between ancient Africa and the Americas. And he started work using his own money.

"I never expected any money," he explains. "I kept quiet about my work. I knew that the subject was suspect."

Van Sertima said he didn't travel much to research the book. "The problem was not that the research hadn't been done," he says, "but that no one had examined the available documents and material and pulled them together."

He researched the book at the British Museum, and in libraries at Princeton, London University and Douglas College, and he corresponded with scholars all over the world.

Van Sertima's zeal for learning about African culture began in England in the '60s while he was working as a writer for the BBC. He had left his native Guyana for London in 1959 to make his way as a novelist, but he was writing for radio to make ends meet.

After being told that he couldn't do a series on African writers because there was no African literature, Van Sertima quit and wrote the series for an independent company.

"While I was doing it," he recalls, "I asked myself why was I studying African writers in English. Why didn't I know an African language? That's when I decided to take a degree at London University in African anthropology and linguistics."

Through the use of several disciplines — archeology, anthropology, art history, oceanography, cartography, botany and serology — Van Sertima argues that ancient Africans made their way to the New World more than 22 centuries before Columbus.

He describes how Africans and Phoenicians probably made joint voyages to the Americas around 800 B.C., when the Olmec people lived in the coastal region near the Gulf of Mexico. Evidence of African influence there, he said, can be seen in an array of material, including the four colossal Negroid stone heads found near La Venta, Mexico.

Other stone heads have been uncovered in Mexico. And numerous Negroid portraits and masks were found with them.

Cultural Evidence

The professor also catalogues cultural evidence in a Negroid skeleton found in the Virgin Islands dating back to 1250 A.D. and the finding of African cotton in the Americas.

Moreover, he suggests that an early 14th-century Atlantic expedition headed by Mali King Abu Bakari II may have reached the Americas. The launching of the expedition is recorded by Arab historian Ibn Fadl Allah al-Omari, according to Van Sertima.

How could Africans, who are not popularly known as seamen, have crossed the 1,500 Atlantic miles to the American continents? Van Sertima answers that Africans were indeed seamen and that a division of Negro sea captains and mariners is reported to have been in the Egyptian navy of the 19th dynasty and the East Africans sailed between their countries and China in the 13th century.

Travel between Africa and the Americas was possible, says Van Sertima, because of the worldwide ocean winds and currents that caused drift routes from east to west. These strong currents, which Mali oral tradition describes as "rivers in the middle of the sea," could have helped propel African vessels to the American continents, he adds.

What meaning do these ideas have for 20th-century people?

Van Sertima said: "Many people feel a certain kind of happiness when they read my book. A certain kind of shadow lifts. The psyche of blacks is raised. No man who believes his history began with slavery can be a healthy man. If you lift that shadow, you help repair that damage.

"Columbus is not just a man. He is a symbol. It was with the coming of Columbus that the twilight of the red and black races began.

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

With alarming indifference to the threat to basic human rights, governments in Canada go on building dossiers on people who receive psychiatric treatment.

Last year the Canadian Mental Health Association revealed the existence in Alberta of a computer network that stores, ready for quick retrieval, files on everyone who receives mental health treatment in the province, in a hospital or as an out-patient. Names and personal details are included. Dr. Gerry Zetter, president of the Alberta Medical Association, described the danger of abuse as "potentially explosive."

And now the Ontario Medical Association reveals that the provincial ministry of health has been collecting similar information, including names and social insurance numbers of patients, on behalf of the federal government.

"We have no objection to the federal government collecting statistical information," Dr. J. A. Saunders, OMA director of health services, said. "But we don't see why it should require patients' names."

The why of it doesn't matter. No excuse is good enough to justify the building of an elaborate set of dossiers on thousands of individual Canadians, and stocking these dossiers with personal, private data to which no one but the patient's own doctor should have access. For much as the bureaucrats may try to rationalize what they are doing, the reality is that they are building dossiers on individuals' vulnerabilities.

It is a commonplace of our time that information is power. Threatening information of this sort, assembled wholesale on a great number of individuals identified by name, and quickly retrievable by computer, is the sort of power that corrupts, unfailingly, those who wield it.

In Alberta last year Social Services Minister Helen Hunley said there was no cause for concern because the information was stored in "a highly confidential system." Dr. Joseph Hanser, director of the health division, Statistics Canada, takes a similar view.

Such attempts to reassure are, to say the least, tatuous. Late last year the United States Social Security Administration assured Congress its computer files on Medicare recipients were secure against unauthorized snooping. Then they ran a test to make sure and found that the security was a myth. The head of the agency concluded that "even the best-designed safeguards for data contained in automated data systems" are ineffective.

In any case, the unauthorized snooping, disturbing as it is, is still less frightening than the authorized snooping of public officials into the secrets of our lives.

It's bad enough to have our private lives readily available to insurance companies, business rivals, employers or potential employers, bankers, credit managers and people who sell plastic seat covers by mail.

But real cause for worry comes when they fall into the hands of the people who not only put together sick fantasies like former solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer's enemies list, but who also have the power and the authority to act those fantasies out.

Enough, Mr. Annenberg

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

What matters is not what's said, but who says it. If The New York Times or The Washington Post were to take a swipe at Canada as an "unfriendly power" with a less-than-responsible government, we would lose no sleep over it. Being Canadians, and having in our secret souls the fantasies that all of us have but none of us admits, we might even be a bit turned on to have been called a "power".

But TV Guide is not one of your esoteric small-circulation house organs of that American endangered species, the Eastern Seaboard Liberal Establishment. It has 20 million subscribers. And for each subscriber there may be a whole household of readers. That's big. That's powerful.

We could, of course, whistle to keep our courage up. We could fake an indifference we do not feel by asking how many people buy TV Guide (the American version) for the editorials by publisher Walter Annenberg. Would it compare, we might ask in a feeble attempt at scorn, with the number who buy Playboy for its book reviews, or Penthouse for its mouthwash advertisements?

Or, much as it might go against our decent Canadian instincts, we could turn boorish. We could ask how many subscribers to TV Guide (the American version) can read?

We might even reach into the shallows of the Canadian soul—if the British are a nation of shopkeepers we are a nation of assistant bookkeepers — and find reason to suspect the purity of Mr. Annenberg's motives for disliking us. Being unable to understand greatness, because we cannot imagine the existence of values unlike our own, we would assume that Mr. Annenberg was just bitter because Canadian publications legislation forced TV Guide (the American version) to give up ownership of TV Guide (the Canadian version), a tragedy that has deprived Canadian readers of regular exposure to Mr. Annenberg's editorials and has denied Canadians the opportunity to contribute their share of the revenue that makes those editorials possible.

ANNENBERG . . . bitter?

But Mr. Annenberg is not that small. In fact he is generous enough to offer an excuse for our "anti-Americanism". He suggests it may come of "Canadian harboring of draft-dodgers and deserters during the Vietnam War". But on that score he may be relieved to learn that the people who came here then for those reasons were, by and large, quite impressive representatives of what we have always taken to be the best of American virtues; not a Spiro Agnew, a Charles Colson, and H. R. (Bob) Haldeman or an E. Howard Hunt in the lot.

So let's take the warning as seriously as it deserves, or we'll have more like it. National Lampoon will stop treating us with the respect we deserve. National Enquirer will ignore Margaret. People will tell everybody where Bob Goulet really comes from. Ring Magazine will say "we are not contenders". That Cosmopolitan Centre Person (we guess) will insist that he is not now and never was a Canadian. Women's Wear Daily will shed an icy light on at-home fashions in the Annex and the side streets of Don Vale. Psychology Today will reveal why Canadians vote so eagerly for men in white shoes. Gourmet will disclose that our national dish is the hot chicken sandwich. Penthouse Forum will titter at the CN Tower. And there will be some very peculiar references to Canada in the classified section of The Village Voice.

BENNETT SESSION SOUGHT

A meeting between Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis and representatives of seven region districts affected by proposed Islands Trust legislation failed to produce any accord.

Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Region Board and a harsh critic of the moves proposed by the province, said Thursday a meeting will now be sought with Premier Bennett.

The regional directors are unanimous in opposing changes which would pass planning and zoning controls on Gulf Islands within the Trust to a committee controlled by government-appointed members.

Campbell said they found no ground for discussing the issue with Curtis. He said Bennett had earlier said he would not meet with them until they had first met with Curtis.

Charter Flights Eased

OTTAWA (CP) — Travellers will be able to reserve seats closer to the time of departure for advanced booking charter (ABC) flights under new Canadian transport commission rules.

A commission spokesman said today the initial filing period has been reduced to 45 days from 60 days before the flight is to leave. The change took effect last Wednesday.

The change is in line with recent moves in the U.S. and Europe, the main areas where ABC charters are operated.

Under ABC rules, a traveller now must reserve a seat and pay a non-refundable sum amounting to 10 per cent of the fare at least 45 days before the flight is to leave. The airline must submit a complete list of passengers which may include some standbys 45 days before the flight departure.

The traveller must pay the entire fare 30 days in advance of the flight. This is the same as under existing rules.

CZ Will Use Hog Fuel For Major Oil Saving

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

CAMPBELL RIVER — Crown Zellerbach president Robert Rogers Thursday announced plans for a $24.2 million hog fuel boiler at its nearby Elk Falls pulp and paper mill.

The boiler would burn waste wood and result in a saving of 600,000 barrels of oil per year.

The project is in addition to almost $50 million in new projects already announced for this area.

"And it is likely there will be more announcements involving new projects for this area," Rogers said.

The $24.2 million project is the first detail following the company's announcement in April it will spend $125 million in improvements over the next five years. No details were given in the April announcement.

In December Rogers announced a $125 million expansion program for the next two years, giving details.

These projects included the following things for Elk Falls: $26.6 million to expand the pulp and paper mill, $1.5 million for newsprint machinery, $17.8 million for a new small-log sawmill and $4 million to improve air quality.

In April the company said it was prepared to spend an additional $125 million over five years and projects would be announced as they were approved by the board of directors.

The board gave approval to the hog fuel boiler thisweek.

The announcement was made at the Discovery Inn at a meeting attended by Campbell River Mayor Tom Barnett, former NDP Alberni MP, and by Comox-Alberni MLA Karen Sanford, who lives 20 miles south of this city.

Barnett said he welcomes the announcemtnt because it would solve the problem of what to do with the hog fuel waste and, in addition, would create 100 jobs during the construciton phase and 11 permanent jobs after that.

Sanford also welcomed the project, noting that the reduction in oil burning would reduce by 70 per cent the amount of sulphur dioxide going into the air from the boiler plant.

The Elk Falls boilers use 850,000 barrels of oil per year. When the waste wood boiler is ready, this will decline to 250,000 barrels per year, a saving of 600,000 barrels or $7.8 million at today's world price.

Rogers said the project will go to tender immediately and construction would take about two-and-one-half years.

Steam produced by the mill would drive turbines on some production machinery as well as being used in the pulp cooking and drying processes.

Rogers said he discussed the project in general terms with the provincial government, including Resources Minister Tom Waterland and Transport Minister Jack Davis.

Davis has taken a direct interest in waste wood conversions, urging the forest industry to find alternative sources of fuel to reduce oil consumption.

This will be the second major hog fuel boiler on Vancouver Island. A $13 million boiler is being constructed by British Columbia Forest Products at Crofton.

Missile Sale Plan

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Congress was notified Thursday by the U.S. defence department that it plans to sell more than $42 million worth of military equipment to Spain and Morocco. Congress has 30 days in which to disapprove of the sales.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 25-year-old Lethbridge man was released Thursday on $500 surety bail after electing trial by judge without jury on charges of possession of hashish for the purpose of trafficking and possession of marijuana.

Aug. 8 was set for a preliminary hearing into the charges.

★ ★ ★

Judge William Ostler sentenced a 38-year-old Esquimalt man to two concurrent terms of 14 days each on charges of impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand.

Philip George Thomas, of 879 Esquimalt Road, pleaded guilty and Mulligan informed the court Thomas had previous related convictions for the same offence.

Thomas was fined $200 May 8, 1972, in Duncan on a charge of having a blood-alcohol content over .08, and was fined $100 Aug. 21, 1972, in Victoria for driving while suspended, and $500 March 4, 1974, in Duncan for impaired driving.

Mulligan said city police attended an accident Wednesday afternoon on Tillicum Road, in which Thomas' car was involved. Damage to the vehicles was estimated at $800 and there were minor injuries, court was informed.

★ ★ ★

Fined $350 each for having blood-alcohol contents over .08 were: Carolyn Ann Cooley, 26, of 2710 Cedar Hill Road; Louis Frank Joynson, 24, of 3800 Quadra; and Douglas Edwin Reid, 19, of 2006 Charters Road.

business

Crestbrook

Sales of Crestbrook Forest Industries Ltd. this year should reach $70 million, about seven times sales 10 years ago when the company first started, president Victor C. Brown told the annual meeting of stockholders here.

He said that during the past 10 years, the company has spent $70 million on new mills or improvements to existing ones and that from these mills the company expects to sell $70 million of forest products in 1977.

Last year, Crestbrook had a net profit of $1,602,000 or 16 cents a share, reversing its loss of $1,927,000 in 1975. Sales rose to $60.8 million, compared with $44.6 million.

Brown said that 1977 will not be a buoyant year for Crestbrook's products.

He added that the company has "not been unmindful of its social responsibilities" but "instant changes in governmental regulations over the past few years made it imperative to have a high degree of self-interest," and some of the regulations have greatly affected operations and added to the company's economic difficulties.

Improving its competitive position will require capital and a slowdown in the rising trend of operating costs, he said.

Dickenson

Dickenson Mines Ltd., Toronto, hopes to resume payment of semi-annual dividends in October at its previous rate of five cents a share, says president A. W. White.

He said after the company's annual meeting that last year the company omitted the dividend normally payable Oct. 31 because of costs incurred to install and build anti-pollution controls at its gold mine in the Red Lake area of northwestern Ontario.

Dickenson last paid a dividend of five cents a share on April 30, 1976, and a total of 35 cents a share was paid during 1975.

White said the company expects to have a much better year than 1976 when it had an operating profit of $141,000 as seven per cent and costs in- gold production declined by creased.

Western Mines

Western Mines Ltd. reports it had net earnings of $503,236 or nine cents a share for the three-month period ended March 31, 1977, compared with $169,985 or three cents a share in the same period in 1976.

Cash flow from operations was $770,329 or 14 cents a share, compared with $406,080 or eight cents a share in 1976.

Company president H. R. Snyder attributed the improvement in 1977 earnings to the decline in the value of the Canadian dollar.

Inter-City Gas

Inter-City Gas Ltd. of Winnipeg has reported increased net income of 73 cents a share for 1976, compared with 56 cents a year earlier.

The firm's annual meeting of shareholders was told that net income rose 47 per cent during the year to $3.84 million on gross revenues of $67.72 million.

President Robert G. Graham said earnings were up substantially during the first quarter of 1977, although detailed figures are not yet available.

Assault on Arctic Planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city-based consortium plans to assault the Northwest passage this summer with two 9,000-horsepower tugs and an ice-breaking barge.

The 4,500-mile west-to-east voyage is being planned by Arctic Transportation Ltd. to prove the company's ability to ship large loads anywhere in the Arctic.

"If the oil and gas companies express interest, they'll know who to go to if they want the job done," said Captain George Tate, company president, in an interview.

Arctic Transportation, a consortium made up of Seaspan International Ltd. of Vancouver, Federal Commerce and Navigation (1974) Ltd. of Montreal and Crowley Maritime Corp of San Francisco, plans to use a $2 million barge called Arctic Breaker for the job.

Now under construction in Japan, the Arctic Breaker will leave for Tuktoyaktuk in the Northwest Territories June 1 with a load of drillpipe and casing for oil companies working in the arctic.

Locked into notches in the stern will be two powerful tugs Arctic Breaker needs to push it through the water. To ease navigation a tower has been built on the barge's bow and a special ice-breaking prow design will help the barge through ice.

A multi-compartmental hold, designed to provide extra buoyancy if one section is damaged by ice, gives the barge added protection, Tate said.

With the length of 316 feet and a beam 105 feet, the 10,000-ton breaker is not overly large, he said, but another company barge of the same design has broken ridge ice up to 17 feet thick and sheet ice up to seven feet thick.

The actual assault on the passage will begin at Tuktoyaktuk in August. During the two-month voyage, expected to cost $4 million, Canadian scientists will make observations and the barge operators will test the vessel's ability in thick ice.

Base Lending Rate For U.S. Dollar Up

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce has announced an increase in its United States dollar base lending rate to 6¾ per cent from 6½ per cent, effective immediately.

The rate is the minimum level at which the bank is prepared to lend U.S funds in Canada.

The bank said the new rate reflects the general increase in interest rates of U.S. dollar funds in Canada.

Several U.S. banks last week raised interest rates

General Ordered Home

WASHINGTON (WP) President Jimmy Carter Thursday abruptly ordered back to Washington an Army general who publicly charged that the president's plan to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea will lead to war.

Maj. Gen. Jon Singlaub, a much-decorated war hero who is chief of staff at the U.S. Forces Korea headquarters in Seoul, was called back for a face-to-face meeting with Carter at the White House.

The president, described as distressed and angered by Singlaub's remarks, personally issued the order in a telephone caall to Defence Secretary Harold Brown. The call was made a few hours after Carter read an account of Singlaub's views in The Washington Post.

White House officials said Thursday night that a time for the meeting had not yet been set. Singlaub, traveling by commercial aircraft, is expected to arrive in Washington Friday.

According to the White House, Carter did not relieve Singlaub of his duties as chief of staff at the U.S. Forces headquarters. But it was clear, both from the speed of the president's action and the comments of administration officials, that the general's future in that position is much in doubt.

"It is obviously an incredible buck of the chain of command," one official said of Singlaub's published criticism of Carter administration policy in South Korea.

The official said the president was not only angered at having his military policy publicly questioned by a subordinate but feared that Singlaub's remarks themselves would encourage North Korea to consider another invasion of South Korea.

Pentagon spokesman Thomas Ross said Thursday night that he assumed Singlaub would meet with Gen. George Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, before meeting Carter at the White House. Asked if the two-star general, who holds major combat decorations from three wars, would be relieved of his Korean command, Ross said, "I don't know."

Singlaub's criticism of the troop withdrawal plan came during an interview with John Saar, chief of the Post's Tokyo bureau, and published by The Post Thursday.

"If we withdraw our ground forces on the schedule suggested it will lead to war," Singlaub said.

NEW HOME COST REACHES $50,000

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the first time in history, the average new American home costs more than $50,000, according to government figures.

The study by the U.S. Census Bureau and department of housing and urban development also showed the most expensive homes are in the West and Northeast, and the least expensive are in the South.

The average price was actually $51,600 for a new home during the first three months of this year — 38 per cent more than the price just three years ago.

The study said the average price during the January-March quarter was 5.3 per cent above the final three months of 1976, about double the rate of increase in any three-month period since the first quarter of 1975.

When the survey was taken during the first quarter of 1974, the study reported, the average price of a new home was $37,400. At the beginning of the decade the price was $28,900.

U.S. to Allow Diet Drinks?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government will look at keeping saccharin-sweetened diet soft drinks on the market for diabetics, but admits the chances are slim.

"Lots of folks would like to find a way to do that," commissioner Donald Kennedy of the Federal Drug Administration (FDA) says, but "the difficulty is how to make it available to those people without spreading the risk (of cancer) throughout the country."

Diabetics, parents of diabetics and doctors told two days of hearings that ended Thursday of the plight of diabetics under the FDA's saccharin ban, which will take effect in July.

"We're going to look at it," Kennedy said as he left the hearings on the ban of saccharin from foods, beverages, drugs and cosmetics, but permit its sale as a single-ingredient, over-the-counter drug.

"The drug and toothpaste issues are fairly easy to deal with," said one FDA official. "But how do you say you'll permit a dangerous food additive on the market for diabetics but not let other people have it? It just wouldn't stand up."

The toothpaste industry and dentists joined the fight against the ban, saying the tiny amounts of saccharin ingested as people brush their teeth are insignificant. Banning the sugar substitute would increase tooth decay because people wouldn't brush if their toothpaste didn't taste good, witnesses said.

BUSINESSMEN DEFRAUD BANK

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The Chemical Bank of New York — the fifth largest bank in the United States — was defrauded of more than $5 million by three Oklahoma businessmen, federal indictments showed Thursday.

U.S. prosecutor Robert Fiske disclosed the indictments in federal court here.

The 31-count indictment charges the three men with mail fraud, making false loan statements and conspiracy. They were named as William Southerland of Tulsa; Lewis Dye of Oklahoma City; and Joseph Moore of Oklahoma City.

Mine Families Share $35,000

KELLOGG, Idaho (UPI) — The families of 37 miners who died in the Sunshine Mine fire May 2, 1972, will split a $35,000 out of court settlement from the state of Idaho.

Originally, the miners' widows and children had sought $37 million.

The suit, filed under the Idaho wrongful Death Act, had charged the state with negligence in inspection of safety facilities in the mine and promulgation of safety standards. A total of 81 hard rock meners died in the Sunshine Fire.

NEWBORN ADDICT, MOTHER CHARGED

PONTIAC, Mich. — In what is believed to be the first case of its kind in the United States, a woman whose child was born a drug addict because she used heroin during pregnancy has been charged with child neglect.

The Michigan department of social services made the charge in a petition in court here to gain custody of the child, whom it said was born of a 21-year-old heroin addict on March 30.

"The mother had been warned in advance to give up her habit and was advised that if she did not, the child would develop addiction," the Oakland County prosecutor said. "On the day of birth, urinalysis showed the mother had ingested heroin that very day."

Nixon's Credo: 'Paranoia for Peace'

By WILLIAM GREIDER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — One word kept coming in Richard Nixon's TV conversation Thursday night, as the former president tried to explain his behavior in the White House. The word was "paranoia."

"Am I paranoic about hating people and trying to do them in?" Nixon asked rhetorically. "And the answer is: at times yes. I get angry at people, but in human terms, as far as I'm concerned, I believe that an individual must never let hatred rule him."

He kept coming back to that subject in his third televised interview with David Frost, explaining his conduct of the war in Vietnam and, as Frost styled it, his war against domestic dissenters at home — the abuses of power which eventually became counts for his impeachment.

"Paranoia for peace," Nixon said at one point, which is as striking as any of the peculiar phrases that entered national usage from the Watergate scandal and Nixon's fall — "stonewall" or "limited hang-out" or the others.

Nixon mentioned the word six times during the interview, without any prompting from Frost. He attributed "paranoia" to his political enemies, he conceded it in himself. It was a moment of rare candor for any politician, especially a disgraced former president, to describe so vividly the fears and resentments that motivated his actions in White House.

The rest of the program was less compelling. Nixon repeated the defence argument of supreme presidential authority which was examined and rejected in 1974, both by the House impeachment inquiry and the criminal trials of his staff subordinates — namely, that anything a president does is automatically legal.

"When the president does it," Nixon declared, "that means that it is not illegal."

Frost endeavored to penetrate that defensive posture, but Nixon held fast to the formulation. In time of war, he insisted, the president may order illegal acts like burglaries to protect the "national security," to preserve the republic.

What about murder? If a president could order burglaries, could he order a murder?

"No, no, no," Nixon protested. "... I don't know anybody who has been president or is now who would ever have ordered such an action."

When Frost turned to the domestic front, the illegal spying and other abuses aimed at political enemies, Nixon's responses revealed not new facts but additional insights into his personal resentments toward the Kennedys and Democratic Liberals and anti-war protesters.

The opposition, he said, included terrible hypocrites. Democrats, who started the war, then turned against it once they were out of power and made it more difficult for him to settle. These people had ill-treated him over the years, it seams.

"Let's take the Kennedys now," Nixon said. "Did you know that in eight years after Mrs. Nixon and I had served in Washington for eight years — vice president, I was vice president and she as my wife — were were never invited to the White House to a dinner or to a lunch?

The social slight hurt him. When he went to the White House as president he said he made a point of inviting Hubert Humphrey, the former Democratic vice president, to dinner and also the Kennedy family.

He described Daniel Ellsberg, purveyor of the Pentagon Papers, as a "punk." The "best and brightest" of the Kennedy-Johnson years "proved to be the worst," he said.

"Nobody can know what it means for a president," Nixon explained, "to be sitting in that White House working late at night, as I often did, and to have hundreds of thousands of demonstrators around, charging through the streets.

"No one can know how a President feels when he realizes that his efforts to bring peace, to bring our men home, to stop the killing, to build peace, not just for our time but for time to come, is being jeopardized by individuals who have a different point of view as to how things could be done. Now that's how I felt about it."

Frost himself offered a maudlin closing — suggesting that Richard Nixon was the war's last casualty. Nixon rejected that melodramatic sketch.

"If I was one of the casualties or maybe the last casualty in Vietnam," he said, "if so, I,m glad I'm the last one."

$4.5B VIETNAM AID NOT A 'PEACE' PRICE

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. secret promise of at least $4.25 billion in aid to North Vietnam was not part of a "price" to obtain a Vietnam peace agreement, former president Richard Nixon said in a letter to Rep. Leste Wolff made public Thursday.

Nixon's letter was the first confirmation by any member of his administration of the 1973 aid promise. His message to Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong spelling out a "range of $3.25 billion" of reconstruction aid and $1 billion to $1.5 billion of food and commodity aid was made public simultaneously Wednesday by the U.S. state department.

Wolff said that former secretaries of state William Rogers and Henry Kissinger had misled Congress by not informing it of Nixon's aid pledge.

He also said he will seek a copy of Pham Van Dong's response which reportedly confirms the aid understanding. Presumably, that response, like Nixon's promise, is not in the state department files, but is only among Nixon's presidential papers.

As recently as last Aug. 2 Undersecretary of State Philip C. Habib told a House committee that Congress had been provided with all the documents relating to the Vietnam peace agreement and that the United States never pledged a specific dollar figure.

Nixon's message to North Vietnam is dated Feb.1, 1973, four days after the Paris agreements were signed.

France, China Reject Bomb Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States failed to win Chinese and French backing for a world ban on all nuclear weapon test-shots.

Diplomatic sources said Thursday that the Peking government has declined the U.S. proposal and has said it intends to continue test-firing nuclear arms.

The Chinese have long argued that U.S.-Soviet attempts to stop tests and to limit strategic weapons add up to a super-power design to preserve their nuclear supremacy.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing also has told the Carter administration he is unlikely at this time to agree to a total ban on nuclear tests. France, like China, also has refused to sign the world pact to stop the spread of nuclear weapons, known as the non-proliferation treaty.

President Jimmy Carter, however, is continuing efforts to transform the existing partial test-ban treaty into a complete ban.

Administration sources say the U.S. and Soviet governments are arranging early talks — probably beginning in Washington next month — to conclude an expanded atomic test-ban treaty in two stages.

The first stage would be a moratorium, lasting one or two years, that would outlaw the detonation of all nuclear weapons underground. The current agreement allows shots with a yield of up to 150 kilotons, or 150,000 tons of TNT.

The second stage would be the new treaty itself, lasting about five years, when its workings could be reviewed and extended.

Carter Disagrees

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Jimmy Carter took issue Thursday with former president Richard Nixon's claim that the nation's chief executive has an inherent power to order burglaries and other illegal actions against dissidents.

"President Carter does not feel any president has a right to break the law," said White House deputy press secretary Rex Gran. He feels very strongly that it is a tragic mistake to follow that philosophy, as past events have shown so dramatically.

"He does feel there are adequate judicial means to prevent danger to the country."

Nixon, defending some of the illegal acts that took place in his administration, made the assertion during the third of his televised interviews with David Frost Thursday night.

On the beach at Cadboro Bay,
Sturdily standing there today,
Is a house with slanted floor,
Done in Early Driftwood decor.

People passing call it quaint,
Possibly for lack of paint,
And marvel at the floor and ceiling,
Cracking plaster, paper peeling.

Clients we have taken through
Although entranced by sun and view,
Recall the tale of Jack and Jill
And feel the urge to fall down hill.

But, if slants do not you faze,
And sun and beachfront is your craze,
Then Shangri-La is at your door,
A slanted home on sandy shore.

B.C. Railway Mystery Man 'No Wild Revolutionary'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harold Wilson, the man named Wednesday at the royal commission into British Columbia Railway as the labor consultant who wanted to "demolish the hierarchy of B.C. Rail," said Wednesday that he is "no wild revolutionary."

Wilson, speaking in a telephone interview from his Ottawa home, said he is a chartered accountant and now is director of administration at the Inuit Tapirisat of Canada, the Inuit Arctic land claims organization.

Mac Morris, chief executive officer of BCR, told the royal commission Wednesday that Wilson was introduced to him in 1974 by former labor minister Bill King as an expert in industrial democracy. He said that three months later Wilson left because of the kind of shake-up he was trying to engineer in the BCR heirarchy.

The railway management, said Norris, agreed to comply with Wilson's request that he be allowed to work on BCR property without prior announcement or introduction to union leaders.

About three months later, Norris said BCR supervisor Peter Deas came to him with a story about a secret meeting between Deas, Wilson and another person.

"Deas was told that all power structures on the BCR would have to be demolished," Norris said, and that supervisors and vice-presidents would have to be converted into "useful citizens."

"We had just started a supervisors development program, which was in direct conflict with what I heard," of Wilson's plans, Norris said

"As an upshot of later developments, Mr. Wilson departed," said Norris.

Wilson said demolish was "too emotional" a word for what he tried to accomplish at BCR.

"There had been problems on B.C. Railway for years and the problem seemed to be that they had a very rigid hierarchy," Wilson said. "My job was to try to break down that hierarchy."

Wilson said the NDP hired him at a salary of about $150 a day to bring BCR management out of the early 19th century but he did not realize the paranoia felt by both union and management.

"Many of the problems on BCR arose because the workers were completely ignored," he said, adding that whenever intelligent, experienced people are ignored, strikes and other disruptions result.

Wilson said that although he was completely neutral in inter-union squabbling, someone, possibly management, spread a rumor that he was involved ith the formation of a new union, the Canadian Union of Transportation Employees, and as a result he suggested to King that "I cool it for a while" and withdrew.

He denied conducting secret meetings and met with leaders of 10 of the 12 unions then certified at BCR. He said Morris was always aware when he made a visit to B.C. from his base in eastern Canada.

Norris told the commission that labor-management problems on the railway should gradually decrease with introduction of a joint council of unions for bargaining and the introduction of an independent board of directors, a move he believed the NDP government was moving toward before leaving office in 1975.

King, interviewed in Victoria, said there was nothing secretive about the 1974 experiment with industrial democracy.

He added that he'd be pleased to appear before the commission to explain the experiment but he hadn't been called.

FORCE LEVESQUE TO POLL: GARDOM

Quebec premiere Rene Levesque should hold his separation referendum "toute suite" and, if necessary, equalization payments to the province should be withheld to hasten the vote, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday.

"He's flirting with it (the referendum) and toying with it and I don't think that is in the interests of the country," he said.

Gardom was expanding on remarks he made earlier this week that Levesque is attempting to finance separation with money received in equalization payments from B.C., Alberta and Ontario.

He said the $1.2 billion contributed to Quebec annually from the three provinces should be put in an interest-bearing trust account until after the referendum.

Gardom said Thursday Levesque talking separation while taking money from other provinces is "pretty hard to swallow."

"I don't think we want to subsidize a wrecking crew," he said.

Gardom said Levesque should hold the referendum as quickly as possible so that he can tell the people that he intends to set up "a single, isolated socialistic country in North America."

He said the holding of the referendum may be quickened if equalization payments were withheld.

"In the interests of Canada, he should get off the pot," Gardom said.

If the people of Quebec choose to remain in Confederation then the monies would be returned to the province, but if they decide "to choose the left for of Rene the Red" then possibly the provinces contributing the equalization money should hold a referendum on whether to continue the payment plan.

Kelly Douglas Threatened With Strike Over Hours

VANCOUVER (CP) — A fight over the compressed work week has created a strike threat at Kelly Douglas which is the supplier for Super-Valu food stores.

The Canadian Allied Manufacturers Wholesale and Retail Union announced Thursday that a strike vote will be taken among 700 employees from May 26 to May 30.

Union President Ron Loftus said negotiations broke off when the company informed the union it will not continue talks "unless the union accepts their proposed terms of settlement on the hours of work."

The union and company compressed the work week into four days in 1975 after a three-year experiment.

Then the company started complaining that it could not properly schedule the work shifts.

Loftus said this year the company wants to remove the four-day week entirely "but we want to keep it because we think we can make it work."

New Teamsters

KELOWNA (CP) — Violations to terms of the 1972 merger that created the present Teamsters Local 213 have resulted in the formation of a new interior local, Al Barnes, secretary-treasurer of Local 213, said Thursday.

Schools Boycotted

NELSON (CP) — The virtual boycott of elementary schools in South Slocan continued Thursday and construction was still halted on a new elementary school.

It was the second day of a protest in the area over a school board decision to demote principal Alec Pereverzoff to a teaching position.

Girl Denied Bail

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Bail was denied in provincial court Thursday to a 17-year-old Vancouver girl charged with attempted murder, wounding with intent, unlawful confinement, indecent assault and gross indecency.

Laurel Marie Carra is one of three 17-year-old Vancouver residents charged in connection with assaulting a 27-year-old Vancouver woman here May 3-4.

FRUSTRATED FARMER GIVING AWAY BIRDS

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Egg producer Arnold Link will give away up to 5,000 chickens at his farm beginning Tuesday as the final move in his battle against the British Columbia Egg Marketing Baord.

Last week, Link sold his egg quota allocation from the marketing board to an Okanagan company, culminating years of battle with the egg board, which he maintains is dominated by Fraser Valley producers.

Link has said the domination resulted in lower quotas for northern producers so Fraser Valley producers could sell their eggs in the north.

He said the needy and unemployed will get first pick at the chickens next week.

About a year ago, Link and another producer gave away and slaughtered chickens after the marketing board ruled that they were producing more eggs that their quotas allowed.

Insurance Sued

KELOWNA (CP) — The executor of the will of David Chapman, a well-known area man who died in a plane crash in 1975, is suing the insurance company which handled Chapman's life insurance policy.

In a British Columbia Supreme Court writ filed here this week, counsel for the Royal Trust Company said the Great West Life Insurance Company owes Royal Trust $70,000 which became payable to Chapman's estate because of his death.

Royal Trust claims the money is owed under a clause in the insurance policy dealing with death caused solely by external, violent, and accidental means.

Weak Rope Blamed

DELTA (CP) — A weakened rope was blamed by a coroner's jury Wednesday for the death of a crewman who fell 60 feet while doing maintenance work on a British Columbia Ferries vessel March 5.

Brett Baker, 33, of Delta, was working on a platform near the top of the funnel of the ferry Queen of Prince Rupert while it was in for a refit at the Tsawwassen ferry terminal.

Although the manila hemp rope used on the scaffold was only three months old, the detergent used in cleaning the funnel had apparently weakened the fibres.

3,000 UBC Grads

VANCOUVER (CP) — Degrees to more than 3,000 students will be awarded at the University of British Columbia's spring convocation ceremonies June 1, 2 and 3.

Gertrude Laing, chairman of the Canada Council, will receive a doctor of laws degree, as will Grace MacInnis, British Columbia's first female Member of Parliament, and Arthur Fouks, former chairman of the UBC board of governors.

Scholarships Won by Pair

Two students from the Greater Victoria area have won two-year scholarships to the Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific.

Duane Prentice of Esquimalt High, received a provincial government scholarship worth $6,000, while Richard Kurth of Mount Douglas Senior High, received a scholarship made possible through private donations.

HOTELS GET MORE TIME

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four major hotels in downtown Vancouver were given a reprieve Thursday in meeting the city's new fire bylaw.

Fire Chief Armand Koenig had recommended that charges be laid against the Hotel Vancouver, Georgia Hotel, Castle Hotel and the Devonshire Hotel for failing to meet new fire bylaw requirements.

Operators of the hotels who appeared before city council's community services committee cited poor hotel business and the expense of upgrading old buildings in seeking delays in complying with the bylaws.

Rifle Changed Timid Man to Cocky Sniper

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kenneth Reid, a sniper fatally shot by police here April 27, had a paranoic almost timid personality until he bought the rifle he used in the sniping incident, an inquest jury was told.

Garry Harland, 30, who lived in the some roominghouse as Reid, said that when Reid brought home a .22-calibre rifle the night of April 26 "he became cocky—powerful."

Reid holed up in the Kitsilano area roominghouse that night and fired approximately 100 rounds of amunition at police. After seven hours of unsuccessful negotiations, Reid was finally shot to death at 4:15 a.m., April 27, by a member of the police emergency response squad which deals with sniping and hostage-taking incidents.

Harland told the inquest that after Reid brought the rifle home "it got to the point where I had to make an impression on him that it was dangerous to treat a rifle in so casual a fashion.

"But he dismissed the whole thing . . . it went over his head, and he began to make me feel pretty nervous."

The six-man inquest jury suggested in their verdict that the incident "might not have happened if strict firearm controls had been in exsistence."

The jury ruled Reid died an unnatural death from gunshot wounds, and, in a clear exoneration of Vancouver police, they ruled the police did all in their power to protect the public and themselves and acted in accordance to the situation.

Coroner Glen McDonald said a man of Reid's psychological makeup should never have had access to a weapon.

Reid believed he was dying of cancer, Harland said, and to stave off the imagined malady, Reid would spend days alone in his room lifting weights. He said Reid was afraid to even walk down the street because he thought people were always looking at him.

"He was afraid of everything," said Harland who had known Reid since December, 1976, and from that date up until the night of the shooting, had talked to him three times.

To Harland's knowledge nobody ever came to visit Reid, who had moved here from Montreal.

"Once he did start talking, he'd talk very rapidly and very fast. His conversation would jump around and was sort of disconnected," said Harland. "He was somehow convinced that he had burnt his brain out (on mescaline) and that he just wasn't straight anymore . . . he certainly was not a normal person."

But at the same time, he said, Reid knew he had a problem and on several occasion asked Harland if he knew of anywhere he could get therapy. Harland said he suggested a provincial medical clinic, and Reid said he had visited the clinic but that no one would talk to him.

On the night of the shooting he said Reid had left his adjoining apartment to return to his own after they had watched a televised hockey game together.

SEIZED MARIJUANA GOES UP IN SMOKE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Most marijuana that police say had a street value of $30 million was burned at a local sawmill Thursday.

RCMP superintendent Bruce Northorp said Vancouver RCMP drug squad officers burned the Thai marijuana found buried May 11 near Chilliwack at an operation of Canadian Forest Products Ltd.

The mill, located in southcentral Vancouver, has special anti-pollution devices on its incineration equipment.

The marijuana previously filled most of a cell in the Chilliwack jail. The 2½ tons of pot was the largest marijuana seizure in Canadian history.

Supt. Northorp said some of the marijuana was saved for analysis and evidence.

Also charged in the conspiracy and sought by police are Robert Dennis Pelletier, Christina Minich and Michael David Rogerson, all of Surrey, and Raymond Matthew Carr, Colin Gilbert, Morris Kerr and Dennis Jorahoy, all of Calgary.

Reporter Refuses to Tell Despite Council's Order

COQUITLAM (CP) — A select committee of municipal council here, established to investigate a leak of confidential information to a member of the press, is no more the wiser after hearing from its subpoenaed witness in a closed session Thursday.

In a brief appearance before the committee, Coquitlam Herald newspaper reporter Jackie Pleasants refused to divulge the source of her information, sources said.

The reporter for the weekly newspaper previously said she would appear before the committee, but only long enough to tell the members "to stuff it."

The committee was set up under Section 182 of the Municipal Act, giving it the same power to call and examine witnesses as the British Columbia Supreme Court. Witnesses could be held in contempt of court and be fined or sent to jail for refusing to divulge information.

An executive officer of the municipal affairs ministry said he could not recall a municipality establishing its own tribunal under Section 182 and testing its power to compel witnesses to testify.

The committee was formed in March by a unanimous vote of council after the Coquitlam Herald published extracts from a letter to the chairman of the council's community development committee.

The letter, from a private development firm, discussed the company's interest in assembling and developing lands for commercial and residential purposes in northeast Coquitlam.

The development firm official subsequently complained that the leak jeopardized the land acquisition plans.

Brian Robinson, select committee chairman, said following Thursday's meeting that the committee would review the testimony of the reporter and other witnesses before it takes fuurther action.

Appealing Umpire's UIC Ruling

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal appeal court was asked Thrusday to set aside a recent ruling that a section of the Unemployment Insurance Act contravened the bill of rights by discriminating on the basis of sex.

The Unemployment Insurance Commission is appealing a ruling of its own umpire, made last February, that Section 46 of the Unemployment Insurance Act discriminates against pregnant women.

Section 46 prevents women from receiving regular UIC benefits during the 15-week period which surrounds their expected date of confinement regardless of their availability for work.

Lawyer Allan Maclean, representing Stella Bliss a member of the Service, Office and Retail Workers Union of Canada, told the appeal court that Section 46 "singles out pregnant women" and treats them differently from any other condition that would entitle both women and men to collect benefits.

Acupuncturist Fined On Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Acupuncturist Grant Smith was fined $250 Thursday for illegally practising medicine after a county court judge reversed a provincial court acquittal.

Smith said he will appeal to the British Columbia Court of Appeal.

The Crown appealed the provincial court acquittal and county court judge John Spencer held that Smith acted unlawfully and violated the B.C. Medical Act when he held himself out as a medical practitioner.

"It is not my task to decide whether or not it is a wise thing to prohibit the practice of acupuncture or other healing methods unless they are performed by doctors," the judge added.

"My only task is to decide whether the learned provincial court judge was wrong when he found that there was reasonable doubt that what Smith did was in breach of the Medical Act."

Smith, a University of B.C. education faculty graduate, was charged after he ran an advertisement offering his services for a variety of ailments.

Body Found

MASSET (CP) — The body of Arman George Labossier, 44, an armed forces man, has been found in a river near Masset, only two miles from where he was last seen February 27.

Byelections Defeat End of Trudeau?

QUEBEC (CP) — Prime Minster Trudeau campaigned at a frantic pace in two federal ridings here Thursday, saying a serious Liberal defeat in next week's six byelections could mean the end of his leadership.

Trudeau told a news conference following a debate with Laval University students that some members of his party would question his ability to lead it "particularly in Quebec," if Liberals lose badly next week.

"I've already been here once, and here I am for a second time and it's rather unusual," he said of his presence in this city.

"Since one way or another my head is on the block, I may as well make sure that the results are as good as possible."

Following the news conference, Trudeau flew off to an evening appearance at a party rally in the Prince Edward Island riding of Malpeque, the only one of the six byelection ridings outside Quebec.

He flew back to Montreal late in the day to rest for today's campaigning in Verdun and Terrebonne, both of which are being hotly contested by the opposition parties.

Saturday, he is scheduled to visit Temiscamingue, in northwest Quebec, left vacant by the death of former Social Credit leader Real Caouette last December. Caouette's son Gilles is seeking to take over his father's seat.

Earlier in the day, Trudeau was greeted by a mixture of applause, boos and catcalls as he appeared for an hour-long question-and-answer session before about 2,500 students at Laval University.

The university is in Louis Hebert, one of two Quebec City ridings facing byelections Tuesday. The other riding is Langelier which covers the

PM Backs Quebec Language

QUEEBC (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he supports the general goals of Quebec's language legislation.

"The Parti Quebecois is attempting to help preserve and strengthen the French fact in Quebec," Trudeau told a news conference. "I don't see Bill 1 as a headlong jump into separatism."

But Trudeau added he is opposed to sections of the bill that infringe on minority rights and said it was important that these sections of the proposed law be changed.

The bill, which guarantees priority to French as the language of work and public administration, would not permit English-speaking newcomers from other parts of Canada to send their children to English-language schools in Quebec.

No Early Vote: Trudeau

QUEBEC (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he has no plans to call a general election this fall, but if he did he would not discuss it with journalists.

Trudeau said at a news conference following a day of campaigning in two ridings where byelections will be held next Tuesday, that he has already said he plans to govern for the normal length of time.

Quebec in the Market For Alta. Natural Gas

EDMONTON (CP) — Quebec Energy Minister Guy Joron said Thursday Quebec is shopping to Albeta natual gas.

He said in an interview he had no specific proposal for Energy Minister Don Getty but "I understand you have a surplus in this province."

Joron, who said the Lougheed government's oil price policy is sound, said Quebec is the last major North American undeveloped market for gas.

"At present, only six per cent of our energy supply is natural gas," said Joron, who met Getty following an Edmonton Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

He embraced Alberta's long-standing position that the federal government has no business meddling in provincial natural resources because it has no constitutional jurisdiction.

For that reason, Quebec would continue to defend the principle that Alberta should set prices for its oil.

He later said the oil price should be forced up to the world market level as quickly as possible.

Quebec currently fills 23 per cent of its energy requirements with internally-produced hydro-power, while 70 per cent is obtained from imported oil, six per cent from natural gas and one per cent from coal.

TAKEOVER BY FRANCE, SAYS MP

WINNIPEG (CP) — Leonard Jones, a controversial independent MP from New Brunswick, says there is a plan to bring Canada under French rule.

Jones, booted out of the Progressive Conservative party in 1974 because of his language views, told a small Winnipeg audience Thursday he feels France already is implementing the plot.

He said he suspects France has started a buildup of its military power on the French-owned island territory of St. Pierre-Miquelon, off the coast of Newfoundland.

Sovereignty OK Sought

MONTREAL (CP) — All federal Social Credit MPs will be asked to approve officially the principle of sovereignty for Quebec in an economic association with the rest of Canada, party leader Andre Fortin said Thursday.

Fortin said a special resolution to this effect will be presented to MPs for approval at a caucus meeting following the May 24 federal byelections.

The Social Credit leader said he has already received verbal approval of the sovereignty-association theory from most of the MPs.

Foreign Aid Increase Urged By All Parties

OTTAWA (CP) — Representatives of all parties in Parliament have called on the government to increase aid, now $1 billion annually, to the poorest countries of the world and to move faster toward opening Canada's doors to developing-country exports.

A report by the Commons external affairs committee containing the recommendations was tabled in the House Thursday. Allan MacEachen, president of the Privy Council, leaves this weekend for Paris where he is to participate in talks on a new world economic order.

The report says that unless minimum standards of human decency are extended to all nations, there will be confrontation and more turmoil among countries than there has been in the past.

Committee chairman Marcel Prud'homme (L—Montreal St. Denis) said the report is the first public document to analyse Canada's loans to developing countries. He noted there are $9.8 billion of these loans — $2 billion from the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), $1.2 billion by the Export Development Cor. (EDC) and about $6.6 billion by private Canadian banks.

The report notes that all developing countries seem to be able to cope with the debt they now have — $165 billion — but poorest countries cannot handle more.

These latter countries must have direct grants or low-interest loans with long repayment periods, it adds.

The report calls on the federal government to increase growth in foreign aid to the rate of two years ago, before such aid was slowed because of economic restraints.

Canada has promised it would work to increase foreign aid toward the United Nations target of 0.7 per cent of the gross national product (GNP) — the value of all goods and services produced.

While the level of aid, mostly through CIDA, has risen, it has not kept pace with the growth in GNP in the last two years.

The report says Canada should open its markets further to Third World manufactured goods, adding that, "this will force readjustment of some parts of the Canadian economy . . ."

This is a reference to situations such as recent restraints Canada placed on imported textiles. The government is considering new restraints on shoe imports. Both these goods are manufactured in developing countries.

Boyle Won't Appear

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative military critic Alan McKinnon said Thursday he has lost his bid to have vice-admiral Douglas Boyle, head of the Canadian navy, appear before a Commons committee to discuss his apparent impending retirement.

McKinnon said in a statement the steering committee of the Commons defence committee rejected his request that Boyle appear before the committee.

"This means that the internecine squabbles concerning Boyle's retirement will probably go on in the press and other media instead of being settled once and for all," his statement said.

He said he is concerned that Defence Minister Barney Danson does not seem to know what's going on in the top levels of the armed forces.

CBC Budget Cut Motion Withdrawn

OTTAWA (CP) — In a surprise move Thursday, Hal Herbert (L—Vaudreuil) announced he will not introduce a motion to slash the CBC's budget because he is worried it would lead to the downfall of the government.

Herbert also said that he was quitting the Commons broadcasting committee because he would find it awkward to remain and not seek a $32.8 million CBC budget cut.

Herbert said he did not think the government could win a Commons vote on the matter — a money issue that could bring it down.

He made the announcements at the fourth and last scheduled meeting of the committee, which has been questioning officials about a proposed budget increase of $59.6 million for the Crown-owned corporation. The CBC received $404.7 million for fiscal 1976-1977.

Herbert is at the forefront of a growing movement of Liberal backbenchers trying to press the government to call a public inquiry into the CBC because they are angered at the corporation's lack of public accountability.

They also accuse the CBC of having an arrogant attitude towards Parliament by answering evasively and incompletely MPs' questions.

TELEVISE WHA FINAL, ANGRY MPs DEMAND

OTTAWA (CP) — Angry MPs voicing reactions from their constituents demanded in the commons Thursday that the CBC start televising the remaining games in the World Hockey Association Avco Cup championship series.

It's the Winnipeg Jets versus the Quebec Nordiques.

It's an all-Canadian title series, the first time in 10 years of professional hockey, said Quebec and Manitoba members as they joined in calling for the games to be televised.

Later before the commons Broadcasting committee CBC president Al Johnson assured Dan McKenzie (PC—Winnipeg South Centre that negotiations are under way between the corporation and the WHA. A final decision could be made today.

If agreement is reached the CBC could tape and would show the fourth and fifth games in delayed broadcasts to be aired after the news on Sunday and Tuesday nights. The fourth and fifth games are being played Friday and Sunday.

The commons committee was informed that Friday night is prime time and the CBC, at this late date, could not possibly open up its program schedule to carry the WHA game live.

A French Canadian raised the issue again in the House after Manitobans had raised it earlier in the week and last week.

Drought Crisis Meet Called by Whelan

REGINA (UPI) — Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan invited provincial ministers to a meeting today to discuss a co-ordinated approach towards possible drought conditions in the five westernmost provinces.

Officials said Thursday two days of steady rain has ended the longest drought in Saskatchewan's history and brought under control the massive fires that had raged through tinderdry Prairie forests.

Whelan said, however, "although recent rains have improved growing conditions in western Canada, we still have concerns about pastures and water reservoirs in livestock raising areas.

"In the event of drought conditions in northwestern Ontario, the Prairies or parts of British Columbia, we must have a federal-provincial plan that can assist farmers."

He said ministers and senior officials from Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia were invited to the meeting — "a further step in our co-ordinated approach toward drought conditions."

Saskatchewan officials announced Thursday the official end to the longest drought in provincial history. In the nine months ending April 30 only 50 millimetres of moisture fell, including snow.

Since May 1, however, it has received almost 100 mms of rain, including 28mms Wednesday and Thursday.

Drought control co-ordinator Phil Polischuk said "The soaking rains in May means this year's crop will be average or even above average." He said crops still need steady rain in June, but normal rain is forecast for the month.

The steady rain has restored moisture in Prairie fields to normal levels and Polischuk said even dry pastures in the southwest received enough moisture to grow grass, alleviating the critical feed situation for ranchers.

In northern Saskatchewan, the rain gave forest officials the upper hand in their week-long battle against 67 fires that raged through hundreds of thousands of square acres of woodland.

Forestry officials said there were only 38 fires still burning Thursday, but all were in the final mop-up stage. They said the fire hazard in all areas of the province was now rated as "low."

At the peak of the forest fire situation on the weekend more than 2,200 workers were on the firelines battling 67 fires, including nine over 15,000 acres in size.

Officials said a 250-mile-long fireline at the largest fire — 200,000 acre Fishing Lakes blaze — has been completed.

Rain has halted its spread and about 400 men have been released from duty. Another 400 were mopping up.

UNFIT FOODS SEIZED

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health protection branch released Thursday its quarterly list of convictions, product recalls and seizures for violations of various food and drug regulations.

Between January and the end of March there were eight convictions, resulting in fines totalling $11,700. Sixty products were recalled and 50 were refused entry into Canada.

In addition, goods valued at $1.27 million were voluntarily destroyed, the health department said.

Among the convicted companies:

—Pepsi-Cola Canada Ltee of Montreal, fined $3,000 on three counts of selling food that was unfit for human consumption or contained foreign material.

—Pop Shoppes Alberta Ltd. of Edmonton, fined $1,600 on two counts of selling food that was adulterated, and that "consisted in part of filty or disgusting animal substance, namely two dead insect larvae of unknown species."

—City Meat and Sausage Co. Ltd. of Winnipeg, fined $4,000 because of the manufacture and storage for sale of food under unsanitary conditions.

Among the items refused entry into Canada were Bocita hazelnut spread from Italy, because it contained glass particles, frog legs from Indonesia that were contaminated by salmonella, and dried coconut from Ceylon.

$10M GRANT TO UNIONS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress has accepted a $10-million federal grant to be used to train union officers.

Under an agreement by Labor Minister John Munro and CLC President Joe Morris, the government will provide $2 million a year for five years.

The government will give an additional $600,000 a year for five years for the training of union officers not affiliated with the 2.3-million-member congress.

Lesbian Agrees to Leave Army

OTTAWA (CP) — The armed forces said today a lesbian who said she has been threatened with dismissal had already asked for and received permission to leave the army.

A defence department spokesman said Pte. Barbara Thornborrow, 25, had received permission to leave the forces weill in advance of the normal time before it was discovered she is a lesbian.

He added that Pte. Thornborrow is due to leave in November and her commanding officer has said if she finds a job that requires she leave earlier, that will be arranged.

The spokesman commented after Pte. Thornborrow, who works in the armed forces photography department, told reporters Tuesday she was questioned by security officials about her lesbianism last week.

She said she was told to sign a document confirming her lesbianism or to agree to get psychiatric counselling.

"I just said I'm not sick so I don't need to see a psychiatrist," she said. She said she has arranged to get a lawyer.

Candu 'Stonewalling' Hit by Opposition

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition spokesmen charged the government Thursday with "indifference, stonewalling, absolute evasion" in connection with the sale of a nuclear reactor to Argentina.

First Allan Lawrence (PC — Northumberland - Durham) and then Don Mazankowski (PC — Vegreville) sought information on the disbursement of $4 million in agent's fees on the sale.

The questions are the same ones they have been asking since Auditor-General J. J. McDonnell first raised the matter last fall of $18.5 million in agent's fees on the Argentine sale and another to South Korea.

Acting prime minister Allan MacEachen, president of the privy council, said he knew nothing of the matters raised by the two MPs and Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie did not respond directly when Mazankowski asked what steps the government planned in servering any connection between Atomic Energy Canada Ltd. and Italimpianti, the Italian agent for both sales.

The matter has been under discussion in the Commons public accounts committee since the auditor-general's report was made public.

Fuel-Saving Internal Combustion Engine Unveiled

WINNIPEG (CP) — A new type of internal combustion engine, which inventor Hoken Kristiansen contends would use fuel twice as efficiently as a conventional engine, was unveiled Thursday.

Kristiansen, an aeronautical engineer, said the prototype embodies the first new thermodynamic cycle since the spark-ignited Otto cycle of 1876 and the heat-pressure Diesel cycle of 1895.

The prototype, built at the University of Manitoba, follows the customary four-stroke principle — intake, compression, power stroke and exhaust — but the piston strokes are not of uniform length.

The varying lengths in the cycle mean the power stoke can be as much as five times longer than the intake stroke, resulting in a more efficient use of fuel, Kristiansen told a news conference.

There were troubles at the unveiling with the ignition system, which failed to start on the first four tries. The fifth time, it clicked, but this was followed by a long series of misses.

"It normally starts right away," said Kristiansen, who stressed the difficulty was only with an apparently faulty connection. "It's just a minor detail."

The new engine, called a K-cycle after its inventor, has eight piston-containing cylinders in a rotor unit around a central drive shaft and parallel to it lie the cartridge chambers in the cylinder of a revolver. They orbit the engine axis as the rotor and shaft revolve. There is just one spark plug.

Each cylinder fires two pistons in opposite directions from a central combustion chamber. Rigid piston rods have rollers at the ends and bear against a cup-like plate fixed to each end of the engine casing.

The plate has an uneven edge, like a wavy line, to give a cam effect. As the piston strokes force the rotor to turn, the cam provides strokes of uneven length.

The ignition, which in a conventional engine fires on every second revolution of the crankshaft, ignites on every revolution with the K-cycle.

Kristiansen, 50, who last year gave up a position as director of engineering at Transair Ltd. to work full-time on the invention, has spent much of his life on internal combustion engines.

The K-cycle prototype weighs about 200 pounds and, at 19 inches long and 13¼ inches in diameter, is smaller than a conventional engine. The prototype has a capacity of 98.6 cubic inches and turns out 150 horsepower

Kristiansen, who said his major previous invention was designing the retractable wheel skis used on Twin Otter aircraft showed how the engine could idle at "about 100 r.p.m., which is somnething an ordinary engine won't do."

Gov't Eyes Wood Fuel

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government is exploring the possibilities of using methanol produced in Canada as a blend with gasoline or a substitute for gasoline in light of the developing energy shortages.

Fisheries and Environment Minister Romeo LeBlanc told the commons Thursday that a report from Inter-Group Consulting Economists Ltd. of Winnipeg concerning the method of producing methanol was being studied.

"It is an excellent report and opens the possibilities for interesting developments," he told Dan McKenzie (PC — Winnipeg South Centre).

As a second step an interdepartmental government committee has been established. It consists of officials from the departments of energy, mines and resources and from other departments including those with financial responsibility for examining the feasibilities of the proposal. It will bring forward recommendations.

"The proposal offers interesting prospects for the utilization of a lot of the waste wood in our country," said LeBlanc.

McKenzie raised the question. He said methanol can be produced economically in Canada from surplus forest materials. This could be important in view of the prospect of gasoline rationing in the future.

Methanol can be produced from surplus forest materials in Canada. It can be used alone or as a blend with gasoline, said McKenzie.

He enquired what action the government was taking to promote methanol production.

McKenzie pointed out that the study stated that the erection of a methanol plant would create 40,000 new job openings. He asked if the government is planning meetings with the private sector, including the forest industry, to get such a plant started.

LeBlanc said the government had not yet reached that stage. However he said if the government decided to launch such a project it would be logical to involve private industry.

The study completed in September, 1976, showed large quantities of methanol can be economically produced in Canada from surplus forest materials to help power automobiles and other forms of production, said McKenzie.

Surplus forest biomass includes trees available as part of the annual allowable cut as well as species regarded as unsuitable for commercial forestry operations. Wood residues such as slash from harvesting, bark and sawdust, viewed as wastes by the pulp and paper industry are suitable for methanol production.

It can be used alone or as a blend with gasoline. In Europe prior to the Second World War, some 4,000,000 cars were using 150,000,000 gallons of methanol blended with gasoline each year. In an unblended state there have to be certain design changes in motors and materials but in blended fuel (up to 20 per cent methanol) only minor and inexpensive alterations are necessary.

U.K. in the Black—Black Gold

By BERNARD NOSSITER
Washington Post

LONDON — Late last fall, Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey of Britain and William Simon, the conservative U.S. treasury secretary, were locked in a backstage battle over a $3.9 billion loan that Britain thought it desperately needed. London finally got the money from the International Monetary Fund, but it took the intervention of the secretary of state, Henry Kissinger, to get the funds on terms that Britain's Labor government thought it could afford.

Five months later, it now appears that the titaptic struggle need never have happened. Black gold from the North Sea has completely transformed the nation's international balance sheet. Big debts are being turned into surpluses and some monetary authorities here are privately urging that Britain pass up the unused half, or more, of the loan that was won with so much effort.

Top figures in Prime Minister James Callaghan's government dismiss such heady talk as "premature."

"When you have gone to so much trouble to get the money," said one key negotiator, "you're a fool not to keep and use it." But even this official acknowledges that if Britain stays on its present course, if the new bulge of black ink in the foreign accounts continues to swell, he might take a different view at the end of the year. By then Britain will have drawn about $2 billion of the loan and could forego the remaining $1.9 billion.

This dramatic turn in Britain's fortunes does not reflect any wise new government policy. It does not mean that British business or working habits have been magically transformed or even that there is any greater mastery here over inflation. The change has come about purely and simply because of the existence of North Sea oil and an exploitation timetable that is bringing the stuff ashore in ever-growing quantities.

To measure the importance of oil for Britain's global balance sheet, consider these figures: last year, the nation spent on imported goods, tourism abroad and other foreign outlays nearly $2.5 billion more than it earned. That was the deficit on the current account. Oil imports to power industry, run cars and heat homes was the whole story and then some. Britain's net import bill for fuel last year was a huge $6.8 billion.

So far through April this year the overall current account has swung into a surplus of $217 million, implying a balance of $1 billion for the year as a whole. As British oil replaced crude from Saudi Arabia, the fuel import bill for the three months stood at $1.2 billion. This suggests an oil deficit for the year of $4.8 billion, some $2 billion less than last year. In fact, it should be well under this because the British oil is coming home at an increasing pace.

That, moreover, is a continuing trend. No matter how Britain's industrial exporters perform, oil production is to climb steadily until about 1982. Late in 1979, Britain's fuel deficit is scheduled to disappear and the nation plans to export crude in the 1980s. Barring a complete collapse of British industry, the nation will be racking up big surpluses in its dealings abroad.

The same banks, multinational corporations and oil governments that drove the pound down sharply last year have finally awakened to the startling change. They have been pouring money into British banks instead of pulling it out. Reserves of foreign currencies here have leaped from $4.1 billion in December to $10.1 billion in April.

The Bank of England, which ultimately receives the foreign currency, could have played it differently. Instead of building reserves, it might have let the price of the pound rise against other currencies. Indeed, a more expensive pound would cut the cost of imports and thereby slash living costs for the man in the street.

The IMF, which gave Britain the big loan, is said to be against such a plan, however. It reportedly fears that the pound, now about $1.72, is too high for the health of Britain's sluggish exporters. The fund is said to want an even lower rate to keep Britain's inefficient manufacturers competitive.

Some commentators here, however, note that Britain's exporters did not take advantage of the falling pound last year to cut their prices abroad. Instead thty pocketed windfall profits in foreign currencies. So, the argument runs, a rising pound now would not hurt exports but only cut back on the windfall profits.

The central point, however, is this: Six months ago it would have been unthinkable that Britons could debate letting the pound rise. The big IMF loan was secured to check a drastic fall in confidence and sickening plunge in the pound.

Despite the improved international balance sheet and the mounting flow of oil, nothing fundamental here has changed. Britain still suffers, along with Italy, from the worst inflation in the industrialized world. For the last three months, consumer prices have averaged 16.5 per cent more than a year ago and unemployment hovers near a postwar high.

The strikingly improved payments balance and the stronger pound that comes with it (a strength that is threatened by the inflation rate) could give the government more freedom of action. If Callaghan and Healey want to cut taxes or enlarge spending to stimulate the economy, they could do so without fear that Britain would be back in the hands of its creditors.

Sniper's Death 'Unnatural'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury has ruled that a sniper in the city's Kitsilano district died unnaturally April 27 when he was felled by police shotgun blasts.

The jury also ruled that police did all they could to protect the public during the incident and that the shooting might not have happened if stricter firearms legislation was in force.

Kenneth Norman Reid, 27, of Montreal held police at bay for seven hours, firing more than 50 shots from his third-floor suite in a rooming house.

LISTEN TO THE EXPERTS.

"It's nice knowing I have one of the originals. People have realized that the Civic is a good car to buy. It's economical, and obviously people go to dealerships and test drive them and realize they are a great car."

Jennifer Read, Ottawa, Ontario.

"I'm an aeronautical engineer myself and know a bit about building cars and what-have-you. I find it's a real well-built car. It's put together with a lot of reason, too. The controls from your steering wheel... dimming your lights, raising and lowering them, putting on your windshield wipers and putting the fluid on your windshield... all controlled with finger control from your steering wheel. I think that's quite something."

Tommy Douglas, Huntsville, Ontario.

"It's been slalomed... it's been entered in 25 events. I've had it in a few rallies. It's not all a question of driving it to work. The engine itself has got a fairly good redline. You need that. You have to have an overhead camshaft because you have to be able to run up to about 7000 rpm's. The suspension is well suited, mainly because it's fully independent. And with front wheel drive..."

Reg Clayton, Dartmouth, Nova Scotia.

"All I do is, I drive it around at work and then I bring it home. I pick up trip tickets and post bulletins. And that's driving from Port Mann into New West, then over to North Vancouver, then down into the waterfront in Vancouver and then to three other places in the same road. So it's quite a lot of driving. When we took the car in for the 40,000 mile check, the guy said he couldn't believe that it didn't need some engine repairs or anything. All it needed was the oil changed."

Denise Waugh, Surrey, British Columbia.

It's perfectly all right to question them about their Hondas. It's happened before to them. At work, on the block, at the service station, at the car wash, at the stoplights.

Earthquake Warfare In 10 to 20 Years?

WASHINGTON (CP) — It may take only one or two decades before countries have the ability to unleash earthquakes against one another, a noted U.S. geophysicist said Thursday.

Gordon MacDonald, a former advisor to the defence and state departments, said in an interview that other foreseeable uses of nature's destructive forces as military weapons include creating tidal waves, cooking areas with fatal ultraviolet radiation by knocking holes in the ozone layer of the atmosphere, steering storms and producing climate changes by various means.

And these things can be done secretly, lessening the chance of retaliation, MacDonald said.

The spectre of such environmental warfare, however, was lessened this week as U.S. and Soviet officials signed a convention renouncing "military or other hostile use of environmental modification techniques having widespread, long-lasting or severe effects."

MacDonald welcomed the signing but said the language of the convention could be improved.

The geophysicist, now with Dartmouth College in New Hampshire, said qualifications in the convention may still allow such activities as cloudseeding designed either to prevent rain in a country or cause excessive rain.

His concern is not academic: between 1967 and 1972 U.S. forces were engaged in a rainmaking project designed to make the Ho Chi Minh Trail so muddy that North Vietnamese supplies could not easily move south.

That is the only time the United States has tried large-scale weather modification as a weapon, a Pentagon spokesman said Thursday, adding that it was not successful.

A former Washington researcher, Lowell Ponte, said last year that the CIA seeded clouds with silver iodide in 1969 and 1970 to make them drop their rain before reaching Cuba. He said the purpose was to embarrass Fidel Castro by causing the Cuban sugar harvest to fall well below the promised level.

U.S. officials have denied the allegation.

Although the convention banning environmental war was called a wise idea, the Pentagon spokesman saw no cause for concern about such warfare. "As for doomsday weapons like changing the climate, tidal waves, melting the polar icecap . . . those aren't even vaguely on the horizon considering the state of the art."

Frank Forrester, an official of the U.S. Geological Survey, said experiments in causing earthquakes started in Colorado in the early 1960s after scientists discovered that minor quakes were being caused by dumping liquid waste 2,000 feet underground in a fault zone.

The scientists, working in uninhabited areas, were able to cause quakes of three to five on the Richter scale by pumping water deep into selected areas, he said. They hope to find ways to cause small quakes and relieve tension that might produce devastating ones in heavily populated areas such as California.

In predicting that use of earthquakes as a weapon might be feasible in 10 to 20 years, MacDonald said, he was talking about knowledge progressing to the point where "you can be on one side of the Pacific and trigger an earthquake on the other side of the Pacific."

How Your Garden Grows

All about roses

Roses are very successfully grown in B.C., and once planted will produce attractive blooms for many years. The four main types are:

- Hybrid teas (large flowered bush type);
- Florabunda (smaller flowered and shrubby);
- Grandiflora (cross between hybrid tea and florabunda);
- Climbing (long canes with either large or small florets).

Roses require abundant sunshine, good air circulation and excellent soil drainage. Annual pruning is needed to shape plants and remove dead or weak shoots. Frequent spraying with a fungicide is also necessary to control mildew, rust and black spot, the common rose diseases.

Roses are heavy feeders, requiring large amounts of nitrogen, phosphorous and potash plus lesser amounts of calcium, magnesium and sulphur. They are susceptible to damage by aphids, white flies and various caterpillar type chewing insects. Weeding can also be a nuisance around the base of the thorny plants.

Green Valley Systemic Rose Food provides the nourishment roses need, while also controlling insects and weeds. Green Valley Rose Food does the same fertilizing job, but without the insecticide and weed killer. For supplementary feeding after the first flush of bloom, apply Green Valley Hi-Sol 20-20-20, a soluble fertilizer.

Roses respond best to soil that is near neutral in reaction. Green Valley Dolomite Lime will correct the predominantly acid condition found in this area. Green Valley Sulphate of Potash can be used throughout the season to improve bloom qualities and stem stiffness.

When planting new roses, Green Valley Starter Fertilizer 5-15-10 will provide the essential nutrients for healthy growth.

FLUORIDE REDUCES CANCER?

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — This northern town was the first community in British Columbia to fluoridate its water supply and how has fewer cancer deaths than the provincial average, said Dr. Walter Korezenowski, B.C.'s regional dental consultant.

Dr. Korzenowski said statisites obtained recently by the Northern Interior Health Unit disprove a Washington cancer researcher's report that fluoridated drinking water can cause cancer.

"They show there is absolutely no indication of a trend that can link fluoridated water with cancer," he said, adding that statistics show the opposite — "more deaths in non-fluoridated communities."

Dr. Korzenowski said 12 communities with fluoridated water in B.C. had almost 35 per cent fewer cancer deaths with a cancer death rate per 100,000 population of 123.4 compared with the provincial average of 157.9.

Compiled during a four-year period ending in 1974, the statistics showed Prince George to have the second-lowest cancer death rate. Kitimat, which also has a fluoridated water supply, had the lowest rate.

The 12 communities surveyed with fluoridated water systems included were Campbell River, Courtenay, Cranbrook, Fort St. John, Kamloops, Kelowna, Kimberley, Prince Rupert, Squamish and Terrace.

He's a South Pole Veteran

By AB KENT
Times Staff

George Edward Raven Deacon was once the last man on a continent.

The affable, soft-spoken gentleman chuckled as he recalled the esperience sitting in the sunlit comfort of his Empress Hotel room one afternoon this week.

Sir George, who has studied the Antarctic Ocean for most of his life, claims his only distinction was that in 1936, "the day, or day after, King George V died, I was the only man on the Antarctic continent, simply because I was the last man to get in the boat."

Deacon that year had taken part in one of the five British expeditions to the south polar sea in which he was ultimately involved, giving him the equivalent of seven years seatime near the South Pole.

This year is the 50th anniversary of Sir George's first voyage, and it is being marked appropriately this week by his participation in an international conference at Patricia Bay Institute of Ocean Sciences.

As chairman of the Royal Society's National Committee for Oceanic Researeh, Sir George is a delegate to the Scientific Committee on Oceanic Research, part of the International Council of Scientific Unions.

He is rubbing shoulders with scientists from Canada, the U.S., France, Germany and Russia in discussing all forms of developing the ocean sciences.

"The ocean is not well known," he said.

DEACON

"We must discuss it more if we are to deal with new food sources, pollution, storms, climate, navigation, the role it plays in carbon dioxide in the atmosphere . . .

"As our needs increase and technology advances, so you need to know more about what goes on in the sea."

Even the Antarctic waters have "tremendous possibilities from a food point of view," Sir George said, referring to abundant krill, the drifting, soft-shelled food of whales.

The whales, some of which leave warmer latitudes just to feed on polar krill, are estimated to consume 40 million tons of the little shrimp-like creatures each year — and that figure is conservative.

Sir George said scientists would love to find a way to process krill as an economical source of humanprotein, but so far only the whales seem to be able to make the conversion easily.

Germany and Russia are among the nations working on krill as a bulk food source.

Sir George is not so optimistic about the sea as an alternative energy source. He thinks there may be some practical way of harnessing tides, or perhaps a combination of tides and winds, but he does not see much future in the often-touted wave generator.

It was 1927 when he first went to the Antarctic, 21 years old and just graduated with his degree in chemistry, which in the days before physical oceanography developed, was reckoned as a prerequisite to any study of the sea.

His ship was the 120-foot William Scoresby, which at 300 tons was " too small to got to the Antarctic." The expedition was away 20 months and went for four months at a time without replenishing stores and fuel.

"That was the only time I've ever lost weight," Sir George remarked.

He said he never suffered any ral privations on his voyages, spending most of his time aboard ship, and he never had to sleep in a frozen sleeping bag, although he got his share of cold and wet.

"I sometimes think when I'm standing in the rain on a railway platform that it could be worse."

The Antarctic reputation for high winds and long storms is somewhat undeserved, Sir George suggests: "It isn't such a bad country."

Around 45 or 50 degrees south it is "fairly awful," he said, but in between the big storms there is sunshine and calm.

Sir George continued taking part in voyages of discover in in Antarctica up to 1939, receiving the Polar Medal and Order of the British Empire for his services. During the Second World War he engaged in research on anti-submarine warfare.

He last visited the south polar sea as a member of the Weddel Sea expedition aboard the U.S. Coast Guard ship Glacier in 1975-76, and is still actively studying the Antarctic.

There are similarities with the Arctic, he said, but circulation of the southern oceans has a great influence on the south polar ice cap, and hence on the atmosphere of the Southern Hemisphere.

The meteorology of air-sea interaction is one of the subjects for discussion at the Pat Bay conference. It is a major concern of the Global Atmospheric Research Program in which Canada and some 15 other nations are participating.

Three Lakes Protected From Loggers in Nitinat

Areas immediately adjacent to Tsusiat, Hobitan and Squalicum lakes within Pacific Rim National Park on the west coast of Vancouver Island will not be logged, Forests Minister Tom Waterland said Thursday.

Conservation groups had expressed concern about the possibility of the three lakes, about half-way between Port Renfrew and Bamfield, being logged.

Waterland said in a news release the forest service is not planning the issuance of permits for logging land around the lakes.

He said the service, in cooperation with the B.C. parks branch and Parks Canada, is working toward completion of the proposed Phase Three boundary of the national park.

MLA Urges Fast Appeal Of Tel Hike

The provincial government should immediately appeal the 15-per-cent increase in B.C. Telephone Co. rates, Robert Skelly (NDP—Alberni) said Thursday.

"The government has had time enough to realize the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission approval is both unfair to British Columbia consumers and also is inflationary," he said in a news release.

Skelly said the CRTC decision states that B.C. Tel's service is poor and yet the commission allows the company to boost its rates by 15 per cent.

"How many of our pensioners, unemployed — or even working people for that matter — are going to have their incomes increased by 15 per cent this year?" Skelly asked.

"Clearly the CRTC's decision is self-contradictory and inflationary."

SUNKEN TUG LOCATED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Can-Dive Services Ltd. says the sunken wreck of the 66-foot tug Gulf Master, which went down off the Sechelt Peninsula 10 years ago, has been located about 35 miles northwest of here.

A Can-Dive spokesman said Thursday that the wreck was located May 3 in 360 feet of water, near the White islets, just off Sechelt. Positive identification of the vessel was made two days later.

He said the tug was found about half a mile outside the area that was searched by Can-Dive immediately after the sinking Jan. 11, 1967.

He said Can-Dive conducted the search at its own expense and ministry of transport officials have been notified.

The sinking of the Gulf Master had baffled the experts. She had a steel hull and was almost new. The boat had the latest in safety equipment, radio-telephone and navigation aids.

Crew members — none of whom survived the sinking — had never complained of lack of stability in the boat's design.

Nielsen Promises Pest Spray Review

A review of chemical pesticides and herbicidal sprays used in B.C. will be undertaken by the environment department, but meanwhile a weed-killing program in the Okanagan Lake system will proceed, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Thursday.

The minister said the B.C. Medical Association is well-intentioned but misinformed in its opposition to use of 2, 4-D to rid the lake system of Eurasian milfoil weed infestation.

Doctors are not chemists, he noted, and they are not as well informed about 2,4-D as chemists.

The BCMA has called for a ban on the chemical until tests show no hazard to human life.

It is proposed that 50 tons of Aqua-Kleen, containing 20 per cent 2,4-D, or about 10 tons, be used to rid the lakes of milfoil weed now covering about 1,000 acres.

A March interim report on milfoil weed control in the lakes urges curtailment of herbicides if reasonable control can not be achieved in five years.

Nielsen was asked about the possibility of a ban on the dioxin-based chemicals 2,45-T and 2,4,5-TP, which are considered dangerous even in minute quantities. Along with 2,4-D, these compounds are under review by the U.S. federal government.

Nielsen said that all pesticides and herbicides used in the province will be reviewed, but he did not indicate when.

The environment ministry last week received authority to control agricultural chemicals in a transfer from the ministry of agriculture.

Nielsen said any ban on chemicals probably would have to originate with an interministerial committee on pesticides, composed of representatives of agriculture, environment, health, recreation and conservation, forest service and federal environemental protection.

Nielsen promised a thorough investigation of any proposal to ban chemical agents.

The dioxin TCDD may deform unborn animal and human life, cause skin eruptions, fatigue, depression and reduced reproductive drive. A principal maker of 2,4,5-TP and 2,4,5-T in the U.S. in Dow Chemical Co. Okanagan apple orchardists use 2,4,5-TP but Vance said no traces of dioxin have been found yet in apples.

Much higher concentrations of chemcial agents are used in brush control operations, said Summerland federal agricultural researcher Dr. Norman Loney.

B.C. Hydro is a user of a brush killer consisting of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T, and the latter is also used alone or combined with other herbicides in public and private brush spraying.

The U.S. Forest Service has been prevented by court order from using 2,4,5-T in the northwest, and in Alaska a ban is being considered for 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T.

Murder-Suicide Verdict

Murder-suicide was the verdict handed down Thursday night by a coroner's jury inquiring into the deaths of provincial government biologist Ian Smith, 37, and his one-time girl friend Antoinette Beltgens, 24.

First degree murder is a killing that is planned and deliberate.

Miss Beltgens was shot to death Feb. 11 as she drove into the parking lot of a medical centre at 3042 Shelbourne where she worked.

Let Them Go to Jail—Waterland

If opponents of spraying of spruce budworms in the Fraser Canyon want to be thrown in jail as a result of their opposition, that's their privilege, Forests Minister Tom Waterland said Thursday.

The minister was commenting on reports that the provincial government has called in Pinkerton's security forces to discuss sealing access roads in the spray area.

Those opposed to the spraying say they will go to jail before permitting the government to go ahead with the program.

"It's their choice," Waterland said today.

"If they want to go to jail, that is up to them."

He said there are three or four access roads into the area to be sprayed and they will be secured. However, he said he did not know which firm had been hired to carry out the security measures.

Jumpers Jittery

They Can Desert Their Ships But the Economy Is So Shaky They May Never Find Any Work

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Gerry Elliott doesn't have to read the unemployment statistics to know the economy is shaky.

It's a sure-fire barometer of the economy, says Elliott, manager of the Victoria immigration office. When things are booming and plenty of work around, desertions are high.

Right now the number is low, as low as Elliott has ever seen.

So far this year 27 seamen have jumped ship in B.C. — an average of six a month. Eight came off ships stopping at Vancouver Island ports. Of the 27, 18 are still at large.

In better times — economically speaking — desertions throughout the province averaged 30 to 40 a month.

John Ray, an immigration clerk with the shipping unit in Vancouver, says the most common reasons for desertions have traditionally been illegal offers of employment, dissatisfaction with shipboard life, and girlfriends, roughly in that order.

The job offers, says Ray, generally turn out to be low-paid and temporary. And, alas, most romances are fleeting.

Ray says besides high unemployment in the province there are two other factors that have contributed to the sharp decline in ship-jumping here.

"The ships are getting better," he said. "Most offer pretty good accommodation."

The other factor, he says, is the federal government's move last year to tighten the requirements on persons applying for social insurance cards.

Ray says by far the largest group of ship-jumpers are Greek. That's the case not only here but throughout United States and Canada.

East Indians and Chinese from Taiwan and Hong Kong are next.

They are followed by seamen from nearly every country in the world that has a merchant fleet, with some exceptions. Desertions off Japanese, Red Chinese, Russian and American vessels are rare.

Of the 27 ship-jumpers in B.C. this year, 12 were Greek, three East Indian, four Chilean, two Yugoslavian, two British, one Chinese, one Iranian, one Panamanian and one Irish.

Ray says he doesn't know why there are so many Greeks jumping ship but suspects it may have something to do with the fact there is still conscription in Greece, and youths must serve time with either the armed forces or merchant marine.

"Most of the jumpers are young kids," he says. "It's the first time they've been away from home and perhaps they don't find shipboard life that good.

"They arrive in port, go into a Greek restaurant, hear how easy it is to jump, and, I guess, decide to give it a whirl."

The immigration branch has 10 investigators in Vancouver whose full-time job is tracking down ship-jumpers.

Persons who jump here are caught in Montreal and vice versa, he says.

Some deserters cross the line. A Yugoslavian who jumped ship in Vancouver in February turned up in Seattle a month later — married to an American woman.

Desertions are more than just a pain to immigration officials.

They are a costly nuisance to the shipping companies.

If he is, the company must pay all costs related to the deserter's capture, court costs, legal fees, and return the errant seaman back to his native home, providing a ticket — one way.

TOWN TALK

Harbor West, the new name dreamed up by bureaucrats for the city-provincial development which will transform 68 acres of industrial land in Victoria West to residential use, is enough to make old-time Vic West residents harbor a grudge.

What's wrong with Victoria West? That's what Kay Woods, the area's neighborhood improvement program co-ordinator, would like to know.

She says the traditional question "Do you live in Esquimalt or Victoria West" will probably become "Do you live in Victoria West or Harbor West."

Town Talk has another question: With Harbor West soon to emerge on the scene, can Harbor East, North and South be far behind? And when those are exhausted there are all the compass points in between . . .

LOUIS
. . . Chicago calling

Paul Harvey, of the well-known Paul Harvey News radio show out of Chicago, is as curious as many Victorians.

He wants to know what happened to Louis the parrot, former resident of the old mansion that was torn down to make room for the Chateau Victoria and which contains a top floor restaurant named the Parrot House.

He's doing a follow-up on an old Life magazine article on Victoria's famous parrot who outlived at least two owners, and probably more.

Unfortunately we couldn't help. The whereabouts of Louis who would be 114 if he's still alive, hasn't been known since 1966 when he was moved from the Wilson mansion under great secrecy.

The late Victorian Jane Wilson owned him for many years. Her gardener Yue Wah Wong was given the parrot to care for after her death in 1949. Wong died in 1966, and no one knows where Louis is today.

They will represent B.C. in the Canadian team championships in Toronto June 13 to 19.

All four are life masters, and at an average age of under 28 years that means they've played a lot of bridge.

Food Runs Cut Off

The human resources ministry is cutting off funds to a Greater Victoria volunteer delivery service that brings groceries to the doors of people unable to shop themselves.

Ruth Albertson, president of the Vancouver Island Mobile Community Food Service society, said today she was informed two days ago the funding will end on July 1.

"We don't know what the reason is. The notice came out of the blue, but I can tell you we're going to fight with all we can."

The service, operated with a converted school bus, began in 1972 as a Local Initiatives Project. Human Resources took over funding two years later and last year gave the group $1,161 a month.

Mrs. Albertson said the bus delivers groceries to about 150 senior citizens on a regular basis as well as up to 190 Indians on three Indian reserves in the Greater Victoria area.

"Most of the people who use the service can't shop themselves," she said. "A number are blind, crippled or elderly."

The bus makes door-to-door deliveries Tuesday through to Saturday and utilizes the services of 14 volunteers of whom nine are disabled and three on welfare.

A spokesman for the human resources ministry said an evaluation study of the service carried out last month recommended cutting off funds.

The spokesman said the group is not operating properly under the Societies Act, has no record of meetings for the past two years and is not providing any nutritional advice to Indians as was intended when the society was formed.

Mrs. Albertson, however, said, she had no knowledge of any provision to give nutritional information.

"They sent out a man who spent only a week with us. How can anyone evaluate anything in such a short length of time.

'Harbor West' Plans Unveiled By B.C., City

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government and the city of Victoria have unveiled a long-term development plan for 68 acres of industrial land on the west side of the Inner Harbor.

Envisaged is a revitalized area, to be known as Harbor West, which would include housing porjects, a major waterfront park, marina and museum.

The plan was announced Thursday at a press conference attended by Housing Minister Hugh Curtis, Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf, MLA for Victoria, and Victoria Mayor Mike Young.

Curtis said there would be no immediate start in the area but rather the Harbor West development would be phased in over a period of about 10 years.

He said it would likely be three years before the first home is ready for occupancy. He thought the land would ultimately house about 2,500.

The minister said about 45 of the 68 acres involved is government-owned, and another 22 acres is in private hands, the major shareholder being Canadian Pacific Railway.

The city of Victoria will service the land and the province will provide interim financing. Any surplus received from the sale of the land will be shared between the two governments.

Young said he feels a development like Harbor West is the direction in which the city should be going.

He said the transformation of the industrial area would be done over "a protracted period" but hoped the city could get a modest start within a year.

"It's a pretty fair project for a little bird like Victoria," Young said. "We will be taking it in bite-size chunks."

The area is split in two by Esquimalt Road with a section of the eastern portion assigned to contain about 250 units of family housing and a southern section designed for 800 to 1,000 units of "adult-oriented housing."

Both Curtis and Young pointed out that existing plans are not frozen and no development can go ahead until there has been ample opportunity for the public to submit ideas.

Young said the city may allow corner stores and a hotel in the area.

Curtis said there would be limited commercial development and the idea was to provide mixed housing.

Young said one major obstacle in developing one section of the proposed area was the existence of the oil tank farm.

Artists' drawings show the tank farm area to be the proposed location for a new waterfront park.

Young said the existing leases held by the oil companies expire between 1981 and 1987 and he expected the tanks would all be moved during that period.

He said the regional district is examining other locations for the tanks.

The Harbor West plan calls for the transformation of the old E and N roundhouse into a museum on transportation, science and technology.

Bawlf said there are only two such roundhouses left in B.C., the other being in the False Creek area of Vancouver, and it was going to be torn down.

CRASH KILLS DRIVER

A 21-year-old Esquimalt man whose body was found Thursday night among some rocks off the Malahat Highway was identified today as Robert Wayne Hansen of 865 Glengarry Place.

Colwood RCMP said Hansen apparently had been driving towards Duncan when his car plunged off the highway three miles north of the Malahat Chalet.

Hansen's body was found by a passerby walking along the highway at 7:30 p.m.

The body was about 50 feet down an embankment. Hansen's demolished car was in dense bush about 150 feet further down the cliffside.

Police said Hansen was apparently killed instantly.

Q. I have a Burpie pressure cooker and the spring in the safety valve is gone and the pressure will not build up past 10 pounds. I bought this pressure cooker in Canada and the book has no address for parts. Can you help me? I have gone to all the stores and they can't help. Mrs. B.

A. We tried several of the largest appliance repair shops and, like you, got nowhere. One place suggested trying "in the States," where the Burpie' cookers were made, but no address was available. Woodward's provided us with a Vancouver parts outlet: W. L. Wilks, 2935 West 11th Ave. They said it would be possible to fix your cooker, but with a complete safety valve assembly rather than repairing the old one. Burpie cookers have not been manufactured for a number of years, she said.

Q. I understand that because of strict anti-pollution measures taken in London that salmon are actually being caught in the River Thames. Is this true? J.B.

A. You're right. The Thames, once one of the most heavily-polluted major rivers in the world, now appears to be a haven for fish. In November, 1974, the first salmon caught in the river since 1833 was taken near a power station. The fish wasn't big by B.C. standards — 8 pounds 4½ ounces — but it's a start.

Bagpipe Welcome on Tuesday For First Alaska Cruise Ship

The P and O-Princess Cruises vessel will receive the traditional bagpiper's greeting when she arrives at 11 a.m.

The staff of the Victoria Visitors' Information Centre will present fresh flowers to women passengers and provide information on shopping and sight-seeing.

The Island Princess will leave at 4 p.m., bound for Juneau, Glacier Bay, Skagway, Sitka, Prince Rupert, Vancouver, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

After a similar 14-day cruise from Los Angeles, she will return here June 7. She will make Vancouver her base for nine eight-night Alaska cruises.

Vancouver will also be the summer base for the 17,000-ton Sun Princess, due to make 14 eight-night Alaska cruises.

Pacific Princess, sister ship of the Island Princess, will put in at Victoria six times this summer — June 20, July 4 and 18, Aug. 11, 15 and 29, making 14-night Alaska cruises.

Wiring Blamed

A faulty electric wire is blamed for a fire that caused an estimated $300,000 damage to a commercial building at Government and Johnson Thursday morning.

Deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said today investigators traced the origin of the fire to a length of electrical conduit in a false ceiling above the Little Red Caboose restaurant.

He said the structure, built around the turn of the century, was so damaged by heat and flame it may have to be torn down.

The fire engulfed the restaurant and caused considerable smoke and water damage to the Central Station Cabaret, Bill's Smoke Spot, Tang tailors, China Cleaners and a small antique store.

UVic Asked to Help

Simon Fraser University — the institution chosen by the ministry of education to administer degree completion programs in B.C.'s interior — is looking for help from the Univeristy of Victoria.

"The specialized interests of the University of Victoria, including social work and public administration, should also be integrated into any non-metropolitan offerings," an SFU report released this week says.

The SFU suggestion to utilize UVic facilities is a reversal of the Winegard Commission report that left UVic out of providing programs for students in non-metropolitan areas.

It was a recommendation of the Winegard report that set Simon Fraser up as the hub for post secondary education in the interior.

SFU's preliminary plan suggests using sophisticated distance-learning techniques to give courses in isolated areas.

Carefully developed learning packages containing written and audio-visual materials will be used at home by the student, and would be regularly supplemented through small group tutorials with instructors at convenient central locations.

The various university centres would offer programs administered by units known as "schools."

As well as the help from UVic, SFU says it looks to the Univeristy of B.C. for such professional programs as engineering, law and medicine and other extension courses.

Cross-Town Difference Devastating

By The Associated Press

Steve Stone was a 1976 free agent who didn't have to change his address when he changed baseball teams. He went to Chicago White Sox from Chicago Cubs.

The difference, however, has been like night and day.

"The key to my success has been our offence," said Stone, who was supported by three White Sox homers in Chicago's 8-3 victory Thursday night over Kansas City Royals. "It's been devastating."

Stone, 3-6 with a 4.08 earnedrun average in 17 games with the Cubs last season, is on a hot streak. He has hurled five complete games, compiling a 4-3 record and a 2.34 ERA.

"When the hitters are hot, it gives you a lot more confidence that if you can hold your opponent to three or four runs you'll win," he said.

Jorge Orta, Oscar Gamble and Chet Lemon each hit solo homers for the White Sox, who moved to within one game of first-place Minnesota Twins in the West Division.

In other games, Seattle Mariners blanked Oakland A's 3-0, New York Yankees crushed Baltimore Orioles 9-1, Milwaukee Brewers downed Toronto Blue Jays 5-3 and California Angels beat Minnesota Twins 5-3.

In the National League, Pittsburgh relief ace Kurt struck out eight batters in three innings as the Pirates edged Los Angeles Dodgers 6-5 in 10 innings.

"It's hard to believe how hard Gossage throws that ball," said Pittsburgh teammate Rennie Stennett. "He's fast, fast, fast."

"He can throw that ball — man, can he throw that ball!" said Los Angeles manager Tom Lasorda of Gossage who now has fanned 24 of the last 40 batters he has faced.

In other National League games Atlanta Braves blanked Chicago Cubs 6-0, Houston Astros edged Philadelphia Phillies 3-2, San Diego Padres beat Montreal Expos 5-2 and New York Mets nipped San Francisco Giants 4-3.

Seattle's Dave Pagan, a native of Nipawin, Sask., gave the expansion club its first shutout victory with a six-hitter against Oakland.

Pagan struck out eight and walked one in gaining his first major league shutout and only his third complete game in 15 career starts. He was making his first start of this season after 14 relief appearances with Seattle with a 5.56 ERA.

The Mariners scored twice in the second inning on a double by Dan Meyer, a run-scoring single by Bill Stein and a double by Bob Stinson.

Milwaukee scored four runs in the third inning on six walks and a two-run single by Cecil Cooper.

Toronto starter Bill Singer, 2-6, was the victim of the big inning in which two runs scored on bases-loaded walks and another as Mike Hegan reached base on an error and came around on a balk, a passed ball and a wild pitch.

COOLING HOT HAND is Mark (The Bird) Fidrych, who made his first start of the baseball season Thursday and pitched seven innings to earn decision as Detroit Tigers clipped Cincinnati Reds 4-1 in exhibition contest at Cincinnati. Fidrych, who underwent knee surgery earlier this year, is blowing on fingers to ease burning effect caused by medication applied after he developed blister on pitching hand.

ONLY WHA OPTIMISTIC

Times News Services

There was optimism in Edmonton, denial in Montreal, bitter opposition in Toronto and coolness by players today as rumors of a merger between the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association continued to bounce around.

That made the unofficial score 3-1 against the possibility of a merger, which the Edmonton Journal said Thursday is expected before the start of next season.

Quoting a "highly-placed source," the newspaper said the merger will probably be announced before the NHL draft of junior players early in June.

Edmonton will be one of six WHA teams to join the NHL, the Journal said. Calgary, San Diego, Indianapolis and Birmingham will probably not be asked to join in the union.

However, NHL president Clarence Campbell said in Montreal that reports of a merger are unfounded, stressing that representatives of both leagues who have been meeting for several months to discuss "an accommodation or so-called merger" have no power to negotiate any kind of arrangement.

"The conditions under which it (a merger) could ever happen are so arduous and so expensive it's doubtful it can ever be successful," Campbell said.

The NHL asking price is reported to be slightly more than $2 million for each of the six new teams, with an additional $1 million to be paid over the next five years.

Meanwhile, Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players' Association, says:

"The players' association is not interested in approving a merger."

Campbell says he doubts if the NHL will consider an enlargement to include WHA teams, adding:

"We have enough problems of our own now. It's always very difficult to talk about merger anyway because merger is illegal under U.S. law."

Campbell suggests that an act of Congress would be needed or the WHA would have to declare itself a failing business before the courts could allow the NHL to salvage the WHA's assets.

Harold Ballard, president of the NHL's Toronto Maple Leafs, commented angrily that there is still enough opposition in the NHL to block any plans for a merger.

"The NHL has about five of its own clubs that are in trouble," said Ballard. "We should solve that problem before we start hobnobbing with people who have cost us millions."

Run Dusty Run Preakness Overlay

BALTIMORE (AP) — Trainer Smiley Adams can't pull another major Preakness surprise Saturday, but there are indications his entry is again being overlooked.

Two years ago, Adams saddled Master Derby to victory in the second race of the Triple Crown series, with the son of Dust Commander going off at 23-to-1 odds despite having finished out of the money only twice in 20 starts.

Now Adams is back at Pimlico with Run Dusty Run, another Dust Commander colt who has finished worse than second just once in 15 career starts but is listed at only 8 to 1 in the early odds.

Run Dusty Run has finished second in his last four outings, including the Kentucky Derby on May 7, leading many observers to conclude the colt merely is a perennial runner-up. But Adams disagrees.

"I think I've got a good shot," the veteran trainer said.

In the Kentucky Derby, Run Dusty Run came from far off the pace and lost to unbeaten Seattle Slew by 1¾ lengths in the 1¼-mile event.

For the Preakness, one-sixteenth of a mile shorter, Seattle Slew is expected to be on the lead along with two colts who missed the Derby because of illness, Cormorant and J. O. Tobin.

Seattle Slew will break from the No. 8 post position, just inside Run Dusty Run in the ninehorse field, and is a 3-to-5 choice in the early line to continue his quest of becoming the 10th Triple Crown champion in history.

Cormorant, the second choice at 4 to 1, drew the No. 1 post position—an excellent spot in view of his front-running tendencies and the speedy condition just off the rail at the current Pimlico meeting.

J. O. Tobin, a Maryland-bred horse which was named the champion two-year-old in Britain last year, has won four of six career starts. But he has run on dirt only once, and is listed at 10-1 along with Iron Constitution.

Regal Sir, owned by John B. W. Carmichael of Toronto and ridden by Chriss McCarron, and Counter Punch, who has made all of his career starts in Maryland, are quoted at 20 to 1. Sir Sir, the 12th-place finisher in the Derby, and Hey Hey J. P., winless in eight starts this year, both are listed at 30 to 1.

Wadkins Hot On Closing 12

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Bobby Wadkins, five over par after six holes "and thinking of walking in," changed his mind after an eagle three. He played his last nine in 29 and, with a four-under-par 68, tied rookie Mark Lye for the first-round lead Thursday in the $225,000 Memorial golf tournament.

"Those last 12 holes I just played better than anybody can play," said Wadkins, 25-year-old younger brother of three-time tour winner Lanny Wadkins and another in the long line of previously obscure young men who have moved into a dominant position on the tour this year.

"I reckon you all know, I was five over after six and I was thinking of coming in," Wadkins said. "I'd probably played through nine 'cause I need the practice. Then I made eagle and it kind of turned everything around."

It started a burst of seven birdies and a record 29 on the back nine of the Muirfield Golf Club course.

"This golf course is so tough it's the last place in the world I'd expect to shoot 68," said the 24-year-old Lye.

Two strokes back of them at 70 was a group of four, headed by South African Gary Player, who laced a one-iron shot to within 10 feet of the cup and made the putt for eagle on the 15th hole.

The extremely demanding course, as expected, produced some high scores, the most startling of which was an incredible 87 by Ben Crenshaw, winner of the Colonial National Invitational last week. Crenshaw had only one comment.

"I haven't shot 88 since I was 15," he said.

Burrards Run Streak to Six

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Vancouver Burrards ran an unbeaten string to six games by defeating New Westminster Salmonbellies 18-10 before about 400 fans in Western Lacrosse Association play Thursday.

Doug Hayes and Dale McKenzie scored four goals each for the Burrards, who now have beaten every team in the five-team league at least once this year.

Bill Mosdel had three goals for New Westminster, now 1-2 on the season. Playing coach Steve d'Easum and Al Benson each scored twice. Dave Willong, Dave Matheson and Bob Tasker scored the others.

Salmonbellies were without high-scoring forward Wayne Goss and regular goalkeeper Ted Gernaey and could only manage 24 shots on Dave Evans and Brad Berrow who shared duties in the Vancouver net.

CRUGUET CLEARED

NEW YORK (AP) — Aqueduct stewards absolved jockey Jean Cruguet of any blame Thursday for Lady Singer's disqualification from the sixth race on Wednesday.

Stewards had ruled that Lady Singer, ridden by Cruguet, interfered with two horses early in the one and one-sixteenth mile race before finishing fourth. She was disqualified and placed last.

Cruguet won the Kentucky Derby aboard Seattle Slew and has the mount on the favored colt in Saturday's Preakness. If the stewards had decided to suspend Cruguet, it would not have cost him the Preakness mount, because the earliest the ban could go into effect would be Monday.

Hunters Bow

Victoria Strathcona Stingers tripped Saanich E. J. Hunter 9-6 in a Vancouver Island Junior "B" Lacrosse League game Thursday night at Pearkes Arena.

Forrest Owens, Mark Schoor and G. Sundher each scored twice to pace the Stingers.

Don McCormick Is Last Eight

TORONTO — Two Vancouver-area players — Don McCormick and Harry Britton — advanced into the quarter-finals of the Canadian indoor tennis championships Thursday along with first-seeded Harry Fritz of Toronto.

In tonight's semi-finals, McCormick will play Jean Claude Gosseling of Quebec, Britton meets Dave Brown of Toronto and Fritz faces Andre Cote of Montreal.

Cricket Squads Selected

Victoria and District Cricket Association officials have named the players to both teams for the annual President's XI-Vice-President's XI exhibition match Sunday.

The match, which consists of 50 overs and gets underway at 1 p.m., will also serve as a trials match to pick a representative team for the Victoria-Vancouver provincial playoff June 12 in Vancouver.

Lineups:

PRESIDENT'S XI: Captain Rob Wilson, Incogs; Mark Hillis and Steve Hansen, Alcos; Keith Dixon, Alan Carter and Brian Heaps, Albion; David Auld and Alec Porter, Castaways; Tim Lord, Cowichan; Ken Aziz, Oak Bay; Ray Telford, Nanaimo; 12th man David Gladders, Incogs.

VICE-PRESIDENT'S XI: Captain Tony Quarless and Wally Tait, Castaways; Peter Nation, Mike Nation and John Schofield, Alcos; Malcolm Snanks and John Buchanan, Albion; Jim Wenman and Eric Kiekstad, Incogs; Eric Richards and Kortwright Richards, Oak Bay; 12th man Sandy Colquhoun, Oak Bay.

Derek and Brian Stop the Movers

Derek Drinkwater continued his slick pitching and Brian Meadmore struck the big blow Thursday night at Lambrick Park to keep Gorge Hotel ahead of the pack in the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League.

Drinkwater, yielding only three hits and striking out 11 batters over the seven-inning route, collected his second triumph in two starts as Gorge clipped Greaves Movers 3-1 to make it three straight victories in the young season.

Dave Morgan's run-producing double gave the Movers a 1-0 lead in the first inning and the hotel crew pulled even when Garnet Moen scored in the fourth.

That set the stage for sixth-inning heroics by Meadmore, who struck a ground-rule double with two men out and the bases loaded, chasing home Moen and Russ Holmes and leaving Greaves with a third straight defeat.

COQUITLAM — New Westminster Salmonbellies outscored their opponents 11-3 in the second period en route to a 22-9 victory over Coquitlam J-Hawks in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League game here Thursday.

Mario Gavorchin led the balanced New Westminster attack with four goals while Ivan Turra fired three and double makers were added by Shane Spring, Bruce Shipley, Steve Manning, Gary Lindsay, Jack Fulton and Bruce Turris. Turris and Fulton also had four assists each.

ISLAND ALL-STARS TO FACE VIC WEST

Vancouver Island Soccer League All-Stars have scheduled an exhibition match Saturday that will serve both as a benefit and a tune-up for their May 27 match against the touring Chelsea Club.

All-Stars, who won the provincial tournament and the Russell Cup in 1975 and followed up with wins over Canada's Olympic team in 1976 and an upset victory over Vancouver Whitecaps earlier this year, will meet Victoria West at 2 p.m. at Centennial Stadium.

Wests, who lost 1-0 in an outstanding Provincial Cup final with Italia-Canadian Columbus last Saturday, will have five players on the All-Star roster.

Trout Action Picking Up But Salmon Fishing Slow

Trout anglers should be happy this weekend, as returns continue to pick up in a number of Vancouver Island lakes and streams.

Around the south end of the Island, Beaver, Durrance and St. Mary's (Saltspring Island) have been yielding some good catches of trout.

Limit catches of trout to two pounds have been landed by fly fishermen working Quamichan Lake and all of the creek mouths draining into Cowichan Lake are fairly good.

Trout fishing has also been tops in the upper reaches of the Cowichan River, mainly for cutthroats.

Nanaimo anglers are doing quite well in First, Second and Brannen lakes while McLaughlin and Sproat lakes have yielding some excellent catches in the Port Alberni area.

As usual for this time of the year, virtually every lake in the Campbell River area is worth a try but fishing in Upper Campbell, Lower Campbell, Stella, Pye, Mohun, Roberts, Fry, Boot and Upper Quinsam has been outstanding.

★ ★ ★

On the salt-chuck:

Returns of chinooks to 18 pounds and blues have been tapering off at Sooke. Most of the catches that have been taken were on strip between Possession Point and Secretary Island.

A fairly good catch of chinooks to 28 pounds was reported at Becher Bay with most action on strip or minnow between Aldridge Point and Beechey Head using 30 to 100 feet of line and from one to two pounds of lead.

Jack Armstrong nailed a 35-pound chinook Saturday off Church Rock on a green and white hootchie to top fishermen weighing in at Pedder Bay. Hootchies and anchovies have worked best with most of the catch coming in between Church and Race Rocks.

Two exceptions to the rule — a 23 and a 22-pounder — were landed off the orange buoy inside Pedder Bay.

Strip trolled between 40 and 60 feet in depth has been pulling in chinooks to 14 pounds on The Flats and off Trial Island at Oak Bay.

Al Duffus caught his first halibut Thursday afternoon — and it was a whopper . . . The 127-pounder was landed near Race Rocks after a battle that lasted nearly an hour . . . It was taken on a jigged minnow.

Periodic visits by killer whales in the upper part of Saanich Inlet have suppressed the catch this week but a few chinooks to five pounds have been landed off Whiskey Point while some to 15 pounds were boated off Bamberton and in Indian Bay.

The odd chinook to 16 pounds has turned up in Finlayson Arm and the blues seem to be scattered all over the Inlet.

Fishing for chinooks to 30 pounds is reported hot at the mouth of Alberni Inlet, especially in Rainy Bay, using strip 150 of line and a planer.

The blues near Campbell River have moved out to the vicinity of Mitlenatch Island, where they now reach a maximum of 3½ pounds. In addition, fishermen are starting to land chinooks to 30 pounds off Whiskey Point, the Cape Mudge Lighthouse and Butler Point. Best success was noted by trolling strip or plugs and by mooching with plug-cut herring.

NIBBLES: Only weeks old, the Sidney Anglers Association already boasts approximately 50 members . . . Memberships, $6 for seniors and $3 for juniors (under-16), are available at either Harvey's Sporting Goods or Cornish's Book and Stationary, both on Beacon Avenue in Sidney . . . Officers of the new club are Len Bland (president), Ray Heavener vice-president), Ray Hamilton (secretary) and Vern Gordon (treasurer) . . . Boundaries of the area covered by the association are a line drawn from Moses Point to Cape Keppel on the west and a line from Isabella Point on Saltspring Island eastward and encompassing Portland and Moresby islands to the international boundary and south along the boundary to a point just south of D'Arcy Island, then west to Cowichan Head on Saanich Peninsula . . . Membership isn't restricted to Sidney residents . . . Weigh-in stations have already been established at Harvey's and at Smitty's Marina for members wanting to take part in the organization's monthly ladder or special derbies . . . The next general meeting, open to anyone interested in fishing the Sidney area and contributing to the conservation of our salmon resources, will be held at 7:30 p.m. May 30 in the Sidney Hotel.

Bo Second

CALGARY — Graeme Thomas of Redwood City, Calif., a former member of the New Zealand Olympic Team, beat Bo Mearns of Victoria by almost two seconds to win the $2,000 Royal Bank jumper stakes at the Calgary International Horse Show here Thursday.

Thomas, riding Aramis, turned in a supurb speed ride in the efent's jump-off among five horses.

Hobby Stocks Get the Play

While the superstocks are away, the hobby stockers will play.

That's the situation this weekend at Western Speedway which has a hobby stock car doubleheader slated Saturday night and Monday, the Victoria Day holiday.

The superstocks, which ran at Western the last two weekends, make their first up-Island swing of the season Saturday when they compete at Nanaimo's Grandview Bowl.

Nanaimo, Western and Oyster River Speedway near Campbell River form a three-track Island stock car circuit for both hobbies and supers this season.

A large contingent of up-Island drivers is in the hobby stock class and will be at Western for both weekend races.

Among them are points leader John Robillard who, ironically, has yet to win a main event. But he has 197 points after winning fast heat and placing third in the feature last weekend at Oyster River. He has also wheeled his 1968 Firebird past several opposing drivers to accumulate a heavy total of passing points, enough for a 41-point cushion over second-place Al Miller of Victoria.

Half of the top 10 drivers in the hobby class are from up-Island points, including a father-and-son team. Sam Carnie of Black Creek is currently tied for fourth in his '66 Chevelle with 128 points while his dad, Bill, also of Black Creek, is in seventh spot in a '68 Firebird with 107 points. Sam won last weekend's feature at Oyster River.

Bob Collins and his 1968 Cougar pony car continue to lead the superstock driver standings after two outings with 222 points, but Jim Caudwell and his '67 Fairlane are close behind with 200.

Competitors from the Capital City Go-Kart club provide the between-race entertainment Saturday night with Orval the Clown, who holds the Guiness-recognized record for the world's longest automobile ramp jump is the featured enterainer Monday. He broke the mark at Salt Lake City last July 6 with a distance of 127 feet, 2 inches.

Saturday's time trials begin at 7 p.m. with racing at 8 while Monday's time trials begin at 4 p.m. followed by racing at 5. Gates open Saturday at 6 p.m. and Monday at 3 p.m.

AROUND OUR SHORES

The Salt Spring Island Sailing Club is holding its annual regatta on the weekend of Swiftsure — May 28-29 — and this event is sure to attract a lot of sailors who prefer racing on a smaller scale.

Knowing the Salt Spring Islanders, I can guarantee there'll be lots of socializing when race time is over.

There will be three races for Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet boats, seven for Sabots and five for other class dinghies.

Registration will be at 9 a.m. on the Saturday, dinghy sailors gathering at the Ganges boatyard and keel boats at Harbor's End Marina.

If you need billetting give Mike Cannon a ring at 537-2996. You can also write Phyllis Sinclair, the club's secretary, at Box 1035, Ganges, B.C. V0G 1E0.

Just to make sure everybody gets to know each other there'll be a smorgasbrd on the Saturday evening. Unlike most costs applying to boating, registration fees won't dent the pocketbook. For single-handed dinghies it's $1, other dinghies will be $2 and keel boats, $4.

This Saturday the Victoria Thunderbird fleet will hold its annual Totem cruise race to Bedwell Harbor. The start, if not conventional, at least gives the skippers a little extra exercise. At 10 a.m. the boats will be anchored with sails down in Cadboro Bay. While the rest of the crew wait aboard the skipper must row out from shore in his dinghy with not a stitch of sail being hoisted until he's on deck.

At the other end of the race the first boat anchored and with the whole crew ashore wins.

Another unconventional touch is the one gallon of gas — or half-hour running time — allowed on the way to south Pender.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club won't be holding its usual Wednesday-night series racing next week in order to allow boats entering the Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca classics time to get ready.

Dennis Robinson's Hobo was over-all winner in the PHRF section Wednesday, runners-up being Soren Isbrand's Danish Pastry and George Cesarec's Galeb.

Soren has Danish Pastry moving. She was first of the 25 boats taking part in the Turkey Head Sailing Association's Tuesday series race.

After her came Randy Carter, helming Andy McBride's Crazy Jane, and Gary Cooney, sailing Gerry Porter's Sunshine. There'll be racing again 6:30 p.m. this Tuesday.

Dave Richardson was top Laser sailor in RVYC's Wednesday night racing, edging out Bob Britten and Dave Teece. In Cal 20s it was Tony Marshall's Sunbeam, followed by George Lewis' Sea Fever and Harry Marshall's Tongariro. The first three Thunderbirds were Bob Grundison's Owl, Gorde Nickells' Redskins and Andy McBride's Crazy Jane.

Two races were sailed by the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, on Sunday. The first time around it was Ed Haines' Lotte, followed by Paul Jensen's Dania. Danis came second the next time, top honors going to Doc Beaudry's Sailerette Black Hawk. Black Hawk was overall winner in Sailerettes while Dania was top in cruising class competition.

RVYC's annual 50-miler to Crescent Rock last weekend came to a grinding halt in Race Rocks in the early hours of Sunday. Most of the boats were forced to anchor until tide and wind became more favorable but Louis Lindholm, persistent sailor that he is, kept trying to get through only to touch rock in Annie Cadby.

Reports are she's none the worse for the grounding.

Short Tacks — The capacity house that saw the 90-minute color film Escape under Sail at the McPherson Playhouse this week had a pleasant surprise. Most cruisers who take films or slides of their travellings forget to add the ingredients of humor and as-it-really was.

These young Vancouver adventurers have put together an enjoyable entertainment. If you missed it, it's on again 8 p.m. on Wednesday.

Four Wins for Birch In Wheelchair Games

Gary Birch captured four events and won the meet's most inspirational award to highlight Victoria performances in the eighth annual Washington Wheelchair Games held in Seattle recently.

Birch won the class 1A shot put, 60 and 220-yard races and the men's singles in table tennis.

Bob Sorenson was first in the men's archery and javelin in class II and also placed third in the 440 and fourth in the 100-yard race.

Don Brehart was first in the 25-yard backstroke while Peter Steel won the class IV javelin and shot put and was second in the discuss.

In addition, Bob Barr, Linda Hunt, Theo Stad and Bob Scantebury all placed in the top three in swimming events.

Victoria's wheelchair athletes now will head for the B.C. Games to be held at UBC Jan. 17-19. Results of the provincial test will determine the B.C. team that will compete in the Canadian finals Aug. 20-28 at Edmonton.

Jockey Dies In Car Crash

TROY, Mich. (AP) — Johnny Bacon, a 26-year-old jockey from Hazel Park race trick who gained national attention several years ago when he and his then wife, Mary, divorced so they could ride against each other, was killed early Thursday when his car collided with a pickup truck.

Track officials said Bacon won 628 races in his 11-year career, and the horses he rode brought in nearly $1.6 million.

During the current Hazel Park season, Bacon had 13 victories, including one in the third race Wednesday on Sun Scamp. Last year he had 49 victories at Hazel Park and 33 at Detroit race course.

CRYSTAL BALLS JUST DON'T SEEM TO GRAB US

We read a good deal about advertising research and are frequently reminded of some mystical incantation — figures mysteriously projected, multiplied, divided, contorted to form a supposedly attractive story.

What ever happened to the good old how-many-copies-were-really-sold counts? That's the type of thing on which advertising rates are based.

It's for that very reason we have a no-nonsense, no-mystery ABC audit report of our circulation audience.

If you aren't strong on crystal balls either, then ask to see a copy of our latest report from the Audit Bureau of Circulations

Schinkel Quits as Coach

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins announced Thursday that Ken Schinkel had resigned as coach of the National Hockey League team.

Schinkel, a former player who has coached the Penguins in two non-consecutive seasons, will remain with the club as director of player personnel, a spokesman said.

Chairman Albert A. Savill did not name a successor.

There had been speculation that Schinkel would be replaced following a season in which the Penguins were criticized for playing half-hearted hockey.

The Penguins had a 34-33-13 record and took third place in the NHL Norris Division. They were eliminated by Toronto Maple Leafs in the first round of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

In another move, the Penguins announced that 23-year-old left-winger Wayne Bianchin of Nanaimo has signed a new two-year contract. Terms were not disclosed.

Comic Opera Good Enough to Overcome Poor Acoustics

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Under difficult conditions — another flat floor-hard chair and acoustically poor situation — the Opera Workshop of the Victoria Conservatory of Music is presenting a quite charming performance of Puccini's one act comic masterpiece, Gianni Schicchi, tonight and Saturday.

Victoria audiences are accustomed to hard chairs and impeded stage views and certainly one must be grateful to the Metropolitan United Church's Fine Arts Council for sponsoring these performances, and grateful too for the small mercy of their Ephriam Evans Hall, which at least has a stage and some modest lighting facilities.

The acoustics do not help the singers from the point of view of diction but as the opera is wisely being sung in an English translation, most of the comedy comes through quite well.

And comic it truly is, with its story of greed getting a comeuppance and young love triumphant, thanks to the adroitness of foxy peasant Gianni Schicchi.

Attack, vitality and pace are excellent, thanks to the conducting by Selena James. Balance between singers and accompaniment — Jeanne Wood on piano — is not entirely satisfactory, but this again is due to matters not under their control.

Fine vocal quality and some outstanding acting talent is present among the large cast and there are moments of quite beautiful ensemble singing.

Aubrey Cobham is an excellent choice for the title role. He not only possesses a strong and pleasing baritone voice, but matches it with a commanding appearance, vigor, and acting ability that sketches a convincing portrait of the sly, shrewd peasant.

His daughter, Lauretta, whose romance is in jeopardy, was sung at Thursday's opening performance by Dawn Hood, whose soprano voice was clear and appealing in the lovely aria, O My Beloved Father. Alternating with Ms. Hood in the remaining performances will be Susan Word McDonald.

A host of relatives have come ostensibly to mourn departed old Buoso Donati, but in reality to scuffle for his possessions. Discovery that his will leaves everything to nearby monks, throws them into rage and panic.

It is then that Schicci, being noted for his shrewdness, is — reluctantly — invited to help them to Donati's riches. His brilliant scheme however enriches him and unites his daughter with her love, Donati's nephew.

The fine voices of Olga Grikis as the domineering elder cousin, Zita, Richard Margison as the romantic nephew, Stephen Horning as the family elder, Simone, Judith Johnson and Mary Copland are notable among the talented group.

Vocally and as an actor Dennis Goodwin excels and there are some delightfully acted episodes by John Heath and Al Kynas.

The performance lasts just an hour and is worth a visit.

Seven Gunned Down

SAN SALVADOR (Reuter) — At least seven persons were killed in a gunbattle between troops and leftwingers near here Thursday. Red Cross officials said six of the dead were leftists and the other was a soldier. Several other persons were wounded.

'Sale of Century' Padded with Junk?

MENTMORE, England (UPI)— The 7th Earl of Rosebery, who is selling stately Mentmore Towers and its opulent contents to pay his taxes, has been accused of using the "sale of the century" to dump unwanted objects at high prices.

The first two days of the sale by the art auction firm of Sotheby Parke Bernet have skyrocketed the Mentmore sale to a staggering total — $4,774,685.

More furniture was up for auction today, a seemingly endless procession of highly decorated Italian, Dutch, German, Flemish and Russian pieces that the late Baron Mayer de Rothschild picked up to help furnish his 250-room home.

Next comes armor, clocks, caskets and boxes, Limoges enamels and metalwork — another part of perhaps the richest such sale of treasures of all time.

The sale has brought prices "well above the highest estimates," a Sotheby's spokesman said. Some dealers thought some prices were artificially high.

Rosebery admitted Thursday he had shipped down some 100 items from his other home, Dalmeny House in Scotland. Since the prestige of inclusion in the "Mentmore" sale helped boost prices sky high, some would-be buyers felt this was not cricket.

The Evening Standard newspaper of London accused Rosebery of "using the mammoth Mentmore sale to sell unwanted heirlooms from his Scottish home. . . ."

Rosebery, the 48-year-old descendant of the prime minister who married Baron Rothschild's daughter, is selling off Mentmore Towers and its art objects to pay his $7 million inheritance tax.

Thursday morning's sale of more French furniture brought a total of $1,267,812 and an afternoon auction of silver totaled $498,560 for a total of $1,766,372, boosting the two-day sale total to $4,774,685.

It's Blashers Vs. Pesky Perch

LONDON (CP) — The perch in Alf Leggatt's pond is "missing, believed killed" and the army has gone away.

Quiet reigns again over the rambling Old Rectory he runs as a retirement home for 16 elderly women on the outskirts of the cathedral town of Canterbury.

Alf raises goldfish commercially in the pool at the bottom of his garden—or he did until a sinister shadow glided through the still waters a couple of years ago.

It was a giant perch and, Alf says, in two years it ingested 2,000 of his goldfish.

Alf went fishing. When that didn't work, he patrolled the perimeter with his 12-guage shotgun, blasting the calm surface.

When that didn't work, he tried nets.

And when that didn't work, Alf called in the army. Members of the army's Junior Leaders' Battalion at Dover arrived and planted mines made from plastic explosives.

Only half the mines went off — lines leading to the other have been chewed through and you know who Alf blamed for that.

With the honor of the British Army at stake, the battalion's commanding officer showed up. Lt.-Col. John Blashford-Snell, hero of the Zaire River expedition, Amazon Jungle, Ethiopia's Blue Nile and other forays, arrived in an armored car mounted with a .30-calibre machine-gun.

Blashford-Snell, "Blashers" to his friends, had a wealth of experience behind him.

In 1972, he tackled Tarantulas the size of dinner plates, monster ants and maurauding snakes, to lead an expedition across the Darien Gap between Panama and Colombia.

He was already, at that time, a veteran of the 1968 expedition to the Blue Nile.

Late in 1974 he led the team which tamed the Zaire River (formerly The Congo), a trip on which he was chased by elephants, surrounded by snakes and battered by rapids.

For a man who once blew up sharks off Cyprus, Alf Leggatt's pond appeared to be a cinch.

Late Wednesday, Blashford-Snell again mined the pond and, herding the women indoors, blasted up a waterspout 30 feet high.

Blashford-Snell said later:

"I've tangled with vampire bats, elephants, rhinos, tigers and moray eels and once a giant ray—but I've never been involved with a fish this size in a pond.

"I think it has gone jolly well. It's unlikely that the fish could have survived. Anyway, it has been a good afternoon's training for the lads."

Now, Alf says, he's going to introduce a few hundred more goldfish into the pond to see what happens, but he's a little disappointed over the failure to find a body.

Max Daniel, local angler who spent a fruitless two days trying to catch the perch before the bomb squad arrived, had the last word:

"I don't reckon there's anything in there anyway.

Businesses For Jobless

Victoria Community Workers hopes to start new businesses among unemployed Victorians.

The organization, an offshoot of the Self-Help Society, is a job placement bureau for low-income people willing to take temporary jobs of all kinds.

Dave Shebib, a member, said VCW would like to start a group of businesses with people listed in the organization's files.

"The businesses would use our office for phone calls and so on, until they are self-supporting," he said.

He said three such businesses have already begun, handling clean-up, furniture moving and gutter-cleaning.

OFF THE WALL

Louise DeGrave

The other day, Ralph and I were in an Italian restaurant which displayed the sign, "The bank don't make pizzas and we don't cash checks."

"They don't know our bank," said Ralph.

Our bank makes pizzas. Also omelets, chocolate-covered candies, Chinese food, chicken salad, crepes, hot dogs, and pie. (They also do cholesterol counts, but not at the same time.)

This was all part of a new community service program they were launching, according to the brochure we received in the mail. In addition to the free munchies on scheduled days they were offering a 10-volume cookbook set, cooking classes, a lecture series on problems of contemporary living, a counselling referral hotline for your personal problems, an elaborate program for senior citizens, free local tours, and discounts on domestic tours, cruises, overseas vacations, vitamins, prescription drugs, jewelry, TV sets, major appliances, furniture and automobiles.

"This is incredible," I said to Ralph, showing him the brochure. "What do you make of it?"

Ralph looked it over. "Either they're looking for new business," he said, "or they've flipped out."

"I guess this must be what they mean by full-service banking," I said.

"Look at this list of social activities," said Ralph. "Wine and cheese parties, continental breakfasts, craft classes, bingo, art exhibits, slide shows, mini-concerts, astrology demos, magic shows, consumer workshops, and even special celebrations for Christmas, Hannukah, Chinese New Year, Mexican Independence, and . . . Groundhog's Day?" He sighed. "These days, I guess you can't risk discriminating against anyone's ancestry."

"As far as I can tell," I said, "the only thing they don't offer to do is to take care of our pets while we're on vacation."

Ralph studied the brochure carefully. "You know," he said thoughtfully, "I'll bet if we asked nicely . . ."

"I guess the banking business is so competitive that this is what they have to do to attract depositors," I said.

"Remember that great bank we used to have a couple of years ago!" said Ralph. "The one that gave you a free gift with every deposit?"

"Too bad they finally outlawed it," I said. "I mean, it was such a blow to have to go Christmas shopping again."

"I know," said Ralph. "Well, have you tried any of these new services yet?"

"Actually, I was in there on Monday when they were serving wine," I said. "Most painless withdrawal I've ever made."

"I can see that a whole new day is dawning," said Ralph. "After a rough week at the office, you could stop off for a drink and a deposit. You know. Belly up to the bank, boys."

"Well, it would certainly get the bank involved with the community," I said.

"True," said Ralph. "I think, however, that we are neglecting to ask an important question about all this."

"Yes?" I said.

"How's the pizza?"

New Drug Helps Ulcer Patients

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

From Great Britain and Sweden comes interesting, even exciting, news that stomach ulcers can be cured with a new antihistamine drug.

The drug, cimetidine, is being tried under careful controls before being released in America. The rate of healing of these ulcers in patients under treatment was between three and four weeks.

If this compound is found to be safe, it is believed that the medical management of peptic ulcers of the stomach and the duodenum may be revolutionized.

The electronic pacemaker, so successful for controlling the abnormal rhythms of the heart, is now being used in a modified form for the urinary bladder.

Many patients, without control of their urinary output, are now being implanted with a pacemaker. Dr. Daniel C. Merrill, at the University of Minnesota, and Christopher J. Conway, an engineer, developed this device and are using it with great success.

The patient now can control voiding by simply pushing a button. This is a great contribution, too, to the many paraplegics who are burdened by this problem.

A hereditary condition in which fats and cholesterol accumulate in the blood is responsible in many cases for severe coronary artery disease of the heart.

Now a new technique is in active use in Great Britain for the removal of cholesterol and fats from the blood of these patients.

Dr. Gilbert Thompson, of the Hammersmith Hospital in London, uses a blood cell separator and can reduce cholesterol levels by as much as 50 per cent.

This technique will be invaluable to those patients whose blood levels of cholesterol cannot be controlled by any other means.

Teaching Basics To Stay

VANCOUVER (CP) — An American education expert says the back-to-basics movement in teaching is here to stay, because parents want hard facts on their children's academic progress.

Graham Down, executive director of the Council for Basic Education in Washington, D.C., said in an interview that flexible grading systems often left parents confused.

The Formula

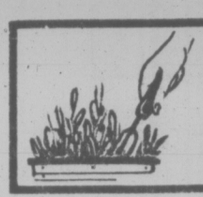
BARBECUE FLAME DOUSER

By NORMAN H. STARK

The backyard cookout has become a national institution in North America. The onset of summer weather sends fathers everywhere to the outdoors wearing cooks' hats and aprons. The smell of cooking hamburgers, hot dogs, even steaks, fills the air. But then, only too often, come the flames to incinerate what's being grilled.

Most meats contain a goodly amount of fat. In fact, the best steaks are liberally marbled with it. When this fat becomes liquid as a result of the heat, it drips on the coals, catches fire an shoots the flames up to the food being griller. Here's a simple, effective, and inexpensive way to minimize this problem.

You'll need one teaspoon of sodium chloride (table salt), one teaspoon sodium bicarbonate (baking soda) and a pint (16 fluid ounces) of water. Mix the salt and soda into the water and transfer solution into plastic spray bottle. To use, direct stream at base of flame. You'll find it far more effective than plain water.



indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: I've tried everything. You're my last resort. I hope you can help me. I have a drying umbrella tree. The leaves are falling off, it's drooping, and the stems are quite soft.

I was told it was overwatered and to water it only when the soil deep in the pot helped. It's still dying. I mist the leaves daily for there is no humidity in my apartment.

Please help before I lose it altogether. It was a beautiful plant before this happened. Thank you. —S.M., Ottawa, Ontario.

DEAR S.M.: If indeed you schefflera (umbrella tree) was overwatered, it is quite possible that the root damage is irreparable.

Once the roots have been impaired, chances are, the plant will not respond to treatment — foliage turned yellow will not return to green, stalks gone soft will not become healthy. Starting over may be your only choice.

Cut the plant back and wait to see if it will grow back. It is just as risky to let the plant go too dry as it is to overwater it. Schefflers like to be on the dry side (not bone dry) and need good indirect light, frequent misting to help avoid red spider mites, and a cool room.

Nut Ring With Fresh Cranberries

1 cup chopped pecans or walnuts
1½ cups fresh cranberries, coarsely chopped
1¼ cups sugar
3 cups all-purpose flour
4½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
½ cup vegetable shortening
1 tsp. grated lemon rind
2 fresh eggs, beaten
1 cup milk

Mix cranberries with ¼ cup of sugar; let stand 15 minutes. Sift flour, 1 cup sugar, baking powder, and salt together. Cut shortening into flour mixture with pastry blender until crumbly. Stir in pecans and lemon rind. Beat eggs and milk together; add all at once to flour mixture. Stir just until evenly moist. Spread into greased 9-inch tube pan. Bake in 350 degrees F oven for one hour or until toothpick inserted in centre comes out clean. Cool pan on wire rack 10 minutes; loosen around edge and centre. Turn out; cool on rack.

Atkins 'Super Energy' Diet Could Be Super Dangerous

By LYNNE GORDON

Have you ever wished for "super energy" — a clear head, a body full of vim and vigor — ready to tackle any thing? Well, Dr. Robert Atkins has attempted to create a diet that promises to give you all that and more, but, according to one doctor, "the diet may be hazardous to your health."

In 1972, Dr. Robert Atkins published a diet book, Dr. Atkins' Diet Revolution. Although close to four million people bought the book Atkins was attacked by the American Medical Association who said the book and diet were "unscientific and potentially dangerous to health."

His second diet book has recently been published and this one promises not only weight loss, but "super energy". Has Dr. Atkins done new research — will his second book, Dr. Atkins' Super-Energy Book, clear him in the eyes of the medical profession and does he provide a safe, healthy way to lose weight and have "super-energy"?

Dr. Zak Sabry, a nutritionist with industry and a professor at the University of Guelph, doesn't think so and warns that "there is nothing really new in this so-called super-energy diet. It is the same high-fat low-carbohydrate diet that doctors condemned as potentially dangerous five years ago."

At that time, medical associations and researchers warned that this diet increased the risks of heart disease. On the Atkins plan you will be getting over 50 per cent of your calories from fat, which most doctors believe is a dangerous level. All reports show that we should be cutting down on our fat intake, not increasing it.

According to Dr. Sabry, recent evidence also shows that high fat in the diet may contribute to cancer of the prostrate and to the breast. "There is evidence", Dr. Sabry told me, "That the fluid in a cancerous breast is high in fat and cholesterol — much higher, in fact, that that found in a normal breast."

Does the diet plan have any merit — will you have increased energy following the plan? To have super-energy, Atkins prescribes massive doses of vitamins and minerals, which, he says, will force the muscles and brain into using fat as a source of energy.

Dr. Sabry told me that this is a fallacy. Carbohydrates supply energy to the body because the muscles and brain cannot and will never be able to burn fat and use it easily or efficiently. "Mega-doses of vitamins," says Sabry, "will certainly not give you renewed energy or a sense of well being, and may even be harmful to the body."

If Dr. Atkins diet for super-energy is potentially dangerous, as Dr. Sabry and other doctors believe, how do you get sound, nutritionally healthy "super-energy"? The answer is not magical, nor is there an instant tonic, according to Dr. Sabry. "A person will feel energetic by eating properly, which means giving your body all the nutrition it needs, not more or less; by exercising adequately, and giving your body the rest it needs."

And, he cautions, there is nothing abnormal about feeling tired at the end of a working day. Dr. Sabry continues, "Anyone who gives me a diet or drug that's going to mask the tiredness, is doing me a great disservice — I won't even know when my body needs a rest, so I'm likely to overtire myself and hurt my body."

So there doesn't seem to be any magical or instant way to achieve super-energy. If you've been plagued by any of the signs of fatigue — inability to do your work, a head that feels "mushy", or tiredness halfway through the work day — maybe your body is trying to tell you something. You may need to balance your diet, or get more exercise or rest. All three are sound, healthy and reasonable ways to achieve "super-energy."

Falls Kill Elderly

CHICAGO (AP) — The major killer of the elderly is falls, the National Safety Council says. Recent statistics show about 11,000 persons over 65 die each year as a result of falls. It says that even when a fall does not kill it often inflicts severe injury requiring long hospitalization and convalescence.

Students Can Paint Themselves Some Vacation-Time 'Green'

By JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH

It's almost that time of year again. The time when you find unemployed "home-from-college" students lying all over the front room . . . and not a decent seasonal job in sight. Or is there?

"Yep," says Joel Ellis, "there certainly is. Summer is the ideal time for any able-bodied young man (or woman) to get out and drum up a few house-painting jobs. That's what I do . . . and I've found that it brings me a good income and many fringe benefits: outdoor work, varied locations, a choice of hours and the chance to meet new and interesting people.

"My part-time business also gives me the satisfaction of performing a valuable service. A home, after all, is a lifetime investment which its owner wants to protect . . . and I help provide that protection."

Joel has several ways — all inexpensive — of landing the jobs he does. "I use as many free sources of publicity as possible, such as the community bulletin boards in super markets and laundromats. You can do the same. Just remember to work your hand-printed notices for maximum appeal to a particular neighborhood. Or try the old standby, 'Student Seeks House-Painting Jobs'. An offer of 'free estimates' is also attractive.

"Cut the bottom of your note into eight or 10 slips, write the phrase 'House Painter' and your phone number on each one . . . and tear off a couple to make business look good. That should be enough to give you a start."

Ellis recommends that you further promote your service by having it listed in the local radio or newspaper swap column (or you can spend $3 to $5 for a classified ad). Another good source of jobs and information, he says, is the nearest paint store . . . one that carries a reliable line and does a high volume of business.

The best way of all to contract work, however, is by word of mouth. "One satisfied costomer tells another," says Ellis, "and the system goes to work for you as soon as you've landed your first assignment in a given neighborhood. A second homeowner sees you in action, approaches casually, ask a few questions . . . and minutes later you're across the street quoting a potential job."

After you've painted a few places, you'll have a feel for making estimates . . . but that won't be of much help the first time a potential customer requests a quote. Joel, though, notes that some of the larger paint stores send out special representatives during the summer home-improvement season. Their job is to advise folks on the quantity of paint they'll need for a particular job and the best manner of application. If you can, get one of these experienced troubleshooters to help you size up your initial quotes.

"I estimate a job one side at a time," Joey says. "Two man-hours for the eaves, two and a half for the peak, two for the windows, four for the space above, below and between the windows . . . or whatever.

"Be warned in advance that unboxed eaves, dormers that have eaves and siding, French windows, patios, awnings which must be removed, leaks, minor repairs and a generally bad surface can slow you down. Allow extra for them."

Although Ellis feels that everyone must set his or her own hourly rate for painting, Donald W. Geary — another part-timer in the business straightforwardly recommends asking a minimum of $5 an hour for such work. "If you have any experience at all, that should be fair to both you and the homeowner," he says. "Later, as you improve, you can charge more."

Joel feels that any "for-hire" house painter should always insist on using first-grade, high-quality paints and thinners. You can, of course, (1) buy such products yourself and have them billed directly to your customers, (2) purchase what you need and add it to your estimate or (3) have the homeowner you're working for obtain the necessary materials.

Ellis likes a 2½ inch-wide nylon brush with a round handle, a 6-to-8-foot wooden step-ladder and a 12-to-14-foot wooden extension ladder. He also considers as essential painting gear the following: dropcloths (old sheets will do), scrapers, putty knives, rags, old newspapers, safety glasses, a hammer, nails, adjustable wrench, pliers, wire cutter, screwdriver, used nylon stockings (for straining scummy paint), painting clothes, shoes with steel shanks (for better support when he stands on a ladder all day) and a wooden box to carry everything in.

As might be expected, Joel Ellis has a lot of other ideas about organizing and operating an independent house-painting business. Most of it is just good common sense (keep drippings off the shrubs, beware of hornets, take regular breaks, etc.). The point is that painting a house, according to Joel, is not as complicated as some of us think . . . but it is work.

Work, I might add, that Ellis enjoys and which he thinks is worth the effort. He says, "How much you make in a season depends on a lot of variables, but one thing is certain: a summer of house painting can supply a good chunk of winter survival money. And, once you've got your hand in, you can always fall back on this useful skill when you need cash."

Widow Conned?

DEAR ABBY: My friend is a wealthy 76-year-old widow who is being "taken" by a couple in their 40s who live near her.

This couple is a husband-and-wife team who have made a "career" out of being this widow's friend. They see that she has company every evening (inviting themselves to her home for dinner), they do all her chores: shopping, cleaning, painting, yard work, etc.

I understnd they even have a key to her home and her safety deposit box! She bought them a new car and has given them an interest-free loan so their son could go to college.

I am told that these con artists are going to get a bulk of her estate when she passes on. I think her estate should go to her own kinfolk who live in a faraway state, don't you?

Should I get in touch with her relatives and tell them what is going on here? They haven't been here in years, so they have no way of knowing. — CONCERNED FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Allowing for your good intentions, I think you are meddling in your friend's affairs. She obviously appreciates the couple's companionship and help, and unless she is mentally incompetent, she's entitled to do whatever she wants with her money—now and later.

Her kinfolk who haven't visited this aging widowed relative in years seem less deserving to share in her estate than the neighbors you describe.

DEAR ABBY: I think my hysband is entirely too friendly to strange women. For instance, he will bury his nose in an elevator operator's hair and say, "My, you have beautiful hair — and it smells nice, too."

When I tell him that it shows a lack of respect for me when he does this in my presence, he says he is only trying to make a poor working girl feel good.

How do you feel about this sort of thing, Abby? Am I wrong to resent it? — Barry's Wife

DEAR WIFE: It is ill-mannered and presumptuous for a man to make personal remarks (complimentary or otherwise) to strange women in (or out of) his wife's presence.

Tell Barry if he doesn't cut it out, one of those poor working girls is apt to work him over.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and have a CB radio. last month I met someone in person that I used to talk to on the radio. We go to the same school, so he was easy to meet.

This person is 15 and spends his weekends at Juvenile Hall. He told me last week that he has six months more at Juvy Hall, after which he will be on probation for a long time. He said he would rather kill himself than to keep going back there for weekends, and that is what he is planning to do.

He said his mother is finally sick of him, and his stepdad couldn't care less about him. I asked if he didn't have some relatives he could stay with, and he said nobody wants him.

Do you think it would be a wise decision to ask this person to come and live with my family because that's exactly what he needs. A family. I think living with us could help him a lot. What do you think? — T.S.

DEAR T.S.: I think you are to be commended for your concern about this person's welfare, but it's up to your parents to make that decision, not me.

DEAR ABBY: Please say a word in your column about these extravagant weddings people put on. I understand such catered affairs run from $25 per person on up.

If the bride's parents spend $25 per guest, the invitee is obligated to buy a gift of the same value.

In our case, the wedding invitation our family just received will cost us $150 to accept.

At those prices, we would have considered it a kindness not to have been invited.

DEAR C.: Where is it written that a guest must match the cost of being entertained by presenting a gift of equal value? A gift is always voluntary — never obligatory.

Waste bins in window shade departments are usually a jumble of plastic cut from standard-size shades too wide for some customers. For no matter how narrow the shade you need, you pay for the extra width trimmed off. Such a waste. The six-foot strip can be used for lining drawers or shelves, trimming wastebaskets or for cut-outs for the kids. Take home everything you pay for!

Ask a lawn mower repairman what mower he would tell his sister to buy and you're likely to hear: A mower with an aluminum deck because it's lightweight and sturdier than other types. And buy one with good wheels. Metal wheels with ball bearings are best, but plain plastic wheels wear out in no time. (Your mower repairman can offer even more tips for buying a long-lasting mower.)

Mothers worried about flame-retardant Tris-treated sleepwear should know that they haven't been able to buy it for sometime now and that the only new pj's, gowns, kimonos, etc. treated with this chemical could be the yet-to-be-worn ones tucked away in drawers at home. Stores know which styles and models are Tris-treated, and they will give a full refund for unwashed garments. When in doubt, call the store where you bought them.

★ ★ ★

Save an extra-large plastic leaf-lawn bag or two for storing off-season clothing. One bag will hold several full-length garments. Poke a hole in the bottom of a bag for the hanger necks. You can seal the open end with a twist tie. Add a few mothballs if necessary; but not if you use plastic hangers. Mothball chemicals can melt plastic hangers and damage the clothing.

Aussies Waltzing to Polls To Pick National Anthem

SYDNEY (UPI) — Australians vote Saturday on four constitutional issues and a more emotional one — whether to adopt a ballad about a drifter who steals sheep as the country's national anthem.

Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser and labor opposition leader Gough Whitlam both are in favor o fthe nostalgic Waltzing Matilda as the national song.

In the minds of most Aussies it already is.

And regardless of the outcome of Saturday's vote they'll continue singing about a Jolly Swagman (drifter) stealing a jumbuck (sheep) from a squatter (rancher) who jumps into a billabong (creek) trying to escape from state troopers and drowns.

Saturday's challengers to Matilda are God Save the Queen, which will remain the national anthem for regal occasions, the sombre Advance Australia Fair and the equally solemn Song of Australia."

Polls show voters divided beetween Matilda and Advance Australia Fair, the latter sometimes criticized as being too expansionist.

The nation's 8.2 million voter will also be asked for a "Yes" or "No" on the following issues:

—To replace retiring senators or those who die while in office with a member of the same party;

—To hold Senate and the House of Representative elections at the same time;

—To make retirement for high court judges mandatory at 70;

—To give electors in the Northern Territory and the Australian capital territory (Canberra) a vote in future referendums.

Fraser and Whitlam have called for a yea vote on the constitutional issues.

But for most voters what should be national song is the main question and Matilda has a strong emotional pul on Australians.

Ingredients in Face Creams Suspected Skin Cancer Agents

By MORTON MINTZ
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In tests 10 years ago, German scientists found that a chemical known as NDELA caused liver cancer in rats that ate it.

Last month, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration unexpectedly started tests intended to find out if application of the compound on the skin of laboratory animals also may cause cancer.

The reason for the FDA study: NDELA has been discovered in 25 of 27 skin creams, body and suntan lotions, hair shampoos and other cosmetic products that are typical of those most widely used.

These products are not eaten. But the scientists who made the discovery said this doesn't eliminate reason for concern.

They pointed out that an additive in some cosmetics, triethanolamine, is "a wetting agent and is used industrially to increase the penetration of organic liquids into wood." Consequently, they said, "It does not seem unreasonable to assume that a significant amount of NDEL applied to the skin may be absorbed."

But, they emphasize, "It is not possible at the present time to assess properly the potential hazards to man."

The scientists — Dr. David Fine and three colleagues at the Thermo Electron Research Centre in Waltham, Mass., and two Massachusetts Institute of Technology chemists — disclosed their findings in a little-noticed report last month. A National Science Foundation grant aided the research.

An FDA official with "no doubts" about the validity of the research told a reporter that the Division of Cosmetics Technology has begun to evaluate its health significance and also will try to find out whether NDELA(N-nitro sodiethanolamine) is present in a large number of cosmetic products in addition to the 27.

Division director Heinz J. Eiermann estimated that it will take a minimum of several months to determine whether application of the suspect chemical to the skins of test animals will cause tumors.

As of now, he said, "We don't know what the health significance is. We must do whatever is possible to find out."

NDELA is a member of a chemical family called nitrosamines that are proved cancer-causing agents in laboratory animals and suspected carcinogens in humans.

Nitrosamines generally form when nitrites, which are created by bacterial effects on the nitrates that are present in every plant, combine with amines, which exist in a large variety of products.

The Thermo Electron report said that in the cosmetic products, NDELA probably forms in a chemical reaction between nitrites (which may be present as contaminants) and amines — including triethanolamine — sometimes added as detergents and emulsifying agents.

Eiermann said that the nitrosamine found in cooked bacon appears to be 269 times more potent a carcinogen than NDELA. Nitrites are added to bacon as a preservative.

Fine alerted the FDA to the research findings on March 22, a day before reporting them to a meeting of the American Chemical Society in New Orleans.

A few days later in Washington, Fine met with experts in the cosmetic industry at the request of the Cosmetic Toiletry and Fragrance Association, Inc.

As a result, a CFTA spokesman told a reporter, the trade association formed four separate scientific task forces. Their missions: to find independent laboratories to buy equipment such as Fine's which is unique, and to use it to try to verify his study through duplication; to review the ingredients of all cosmetic products and try to isolate those that may participate in the production of NDELA; and the search for possible NDELA inhibitors.

Task force leaders wil meet again to discuss their progress, the spokesman said. He also said that manufacturers are investigating their production processes to try to eliminate the possibility of NDELA formation.

"The industry has a record of being responsive to recognizing new issues as they arise," the spokesman said.

The highest concentrations — 48,000 and 25,000 parts per billion — were listed for two samples of Max Factor Ultralucent Whipped Creme Makeup.

Two products, Diaprene Cradol shampoo and Nutraderm Dry Skin Lotion, were found to have either no NDELA or any amount so tiny that it would not be detected.

Ten samples with traces of less than 10 ppb were identified as: Max Factor Ultralucent Waterproof Makeup, one sample of Johnson's Baby Lotion (another had 100 ppb), Keri Lotion, Nivea Cream Lotion, Gillette Deep Magic lotion, Sea and Ski Suntan Lotion, Almay Deep Mist Extra Rich Lotion, School Cocao Butter Lotion, Breck Shampoo for Dry Hair, Mennen Baby Magic Shampoo and Wella Balsam shampoo.

The report listed these other products and concentrations: Revlon Moon Drops 3,700 ppb; Helena Rubinstein Silk Fashion, 1,200; Clairol Herbal Essence Shampoo, 160; School Rough Skin Remover, 140; Avon Topaze Cologne and PPP Baby Shampoo, both 100; Noxema Skin Cream, 83; Head and Shoulders Shampoo, 70; Clairol Creme Formula Hair Color, 68; Bain de Soleil Suntan Creme, 47; Helene Curtis Everynight Extterbody Conditioner, 27, and Extra Strength Desitin shampoo, 22.

Johnson's Baby Lotion usually is used in large amounts, giving an approximate daily exposure of 2 millionths a gram of NDELA daily. But if used as recommended at each diaper change, the exposure, in terms of relative body weight, could be "considerably larger," the report said.

Hearing Opens On Abduction

SURREY (CP) — A preliminary hearing began Wednesday in provincial court on two counts of kidnapping laid against Sandra Ann Hanoum of Hayward, Calif.

She was charged after the abduction last September of two-week-old Cameron Green from his home in this municipality. The infant was found uninjured two days later in Haytward.

Wood Power Plant Tested

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia Power Corp., a provincial Crown agency beset with high production costs for electricity, is working on a project that may result in the creation of a wood-gasification plant to generate power.

Fred Buckley, special projects co-ordinator with the corporation, said the feasibility study is an effort "to pin down the costs of a wood-gasification plant in a firm way."

Among other things, the study is considering the cost of construction and operation of such a plant, the availability and cost of wood and the projected power output of a hypothetical plant.

Buckley said in an interview that such a plant could make use of timber burned in a forest fire but would be designed primarily to take advantage of a permanent supply of hardwood.

After two years of study so far, Buckley says he is optimistic the process can be competitive in price with burning coal to produce electricity.

"However, in order to get approval for the construction of such a plant, we need a firmer and more detailed estimate of the costs for a specific wood gasification plant."

The corporation was not committed to building such a plant, however, but would consider where to locate one or more if the study shows the process is feasible.

Buckley said Nova Scotia is "way ahead of the rest of the continent" in its thinking on the use of wood for power generation.

"I've been looking at burning wood in a limited oxygen supply in a gas producer and using the mixture of carbon monoxide and hydrogen that is produced to run a diesel engine to generate electricity."

He said the process allows the burning of enough of the wood to produce heat which turns the rest of the wood into gas. The resulting gas is mixed with a small quantity — five to 10 per cent — of diesel oil and burned in a diesel fuel engine.

Buckley said figures indicate it is possible to produce a total of 300 megawatts of power on a sustained basis by burning sawmill waste, wood waste from timber cutting, and hardwood growth not being used.

"We have a great chance to improve the condition of the forests by clearing out a lot of junk wood and fallen trees, and using it in wood-gasification plants to produce much-needed power."

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, North-South arrived at a decent slam contract which was there for the taking. But, unfortunately for North, his partner misplayed the trump suit and incurred a one-trick set. Had a better player been the denlarer, the contract would have been fulfilled.

Opening lead: King of ◇.

On West's king of diamonds opening lead, East played the queen, commanding a continuation of the suit. West continued with the ace, South ruffing.

The deuce of spades was then led, and when West followed with the three, dummy's queen was finessed successfully. But when East discarded the deuce of hearts on this lead, declarer's contract became irretrievably lost, for West, with the doubleton K-10 of trumps remaining, couldn't be prevented from eventually winning a trump trick.

Declarer's play of taking the trump finesse was correct. But he went about it the wrong way. At trick two the JACK of trumps should have been led out of the South hand.

If West played low on this lead, the jack would have won the trick. Another trump would be led, and West's remaining K-10 would have been entrapped by the board's A-Q. If West covered the jack of spades with the king (as he undoubtedly would have done), the board's ace would have captured the trick. With East failing to follow suit on this lead, West would now be revealed as having the doubleton 10-3 remaining.

The South hand would next be reentered via the heart king, after which the nine of trumps would be led. It mattered not whether West covered with the ten-spot or didn't, for his 10-3 would be trapped by the board's Q-8.

By leading the jack as his first trump lead, declarer would be taking out insurance at no cost against West having been dealt with the tripleton K-10-3. But, evidently, declarer didn't think of this possibility, and he played the trump suit in the hope that West had been dealt the doubleton king of tramps.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Ted was busy at his father's drawing board when Mike came in. "I only used one sheet of your paper, Dad," the boy said. "It's a problem we had a school."

Mike had a look. "Is that all, just those two big triangles?"

"Sure, but look again," Ted replied. "They're exactly similar, with sides in the same proportions, but the bigger one has two sides the same as two of the smaller one's sides. And the perimeters are 38 and 57 centimetres."

What were the respective dimensions?

THE DAWGS

. . . Love the rambling one-level ranch style house with beamed ceilings, panelled walls, and Arizona Sandstone fireplace. The tremendous views of beautiful Royal Colwood Golf Course and especially the 100 foot patio for sunbathing and entertaining.
There also have an indoor-outdoor run, and electric gate that can be released from master's bedroom. They have nearly an acre to romp on, two large lots, and over 200 feet lake frontage for swimming and rainbow trout fishing.
They also like to watch the many wildlife visitors, ducks, geese, otter, mink, quail, who come all year round.
Their folks don't have to work too hard to maintain things, so there is plenty of time and nearby places to walk. And they don't have to stand guard all night because there is a floodlight and monitoring system for added privacy.
The Dawgs will not be pleased to leave, but they did make friends with the appraiser who valued the house alone at $80,000 and they agreed the location and land values should be negotiated.
If anyone wants to talk it over with them, please phone 478-4169 for appointment.

309 IN MEMORIAM

MARCHAND—In loving memory of my wife, a dear mother and grandmother, Anne, who passed away May 20, 1976.
You suffered much in silence,
Your spirit did not bend
You faced your pain with courage
Until the very end.
You tried so hard to stay with us
Your fight was all in vain,
God took you to his loving home
And freed you from all pain.
—Always rememberd by husband Paul, daughter and son-in-law, Jeanette and Rob, Kim and Chris.

In loving memory of Ted Wood who passed away May 20, 1975.
Two years have passed since you've been gone,
But loving memories linger on.
A page in memories book is softly turned today.
Ever loved and sadly missed,
Jean and Jim, Mae and Reg.

WOOD — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Ted Wood, who passed away May 20, 1975.
If we had one lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
We would pray to God with all our hearts,
For yesterday and you.
If teardrops were a stairway,
And memories a lane
We would walk all the way to heaven,
And bring you back again.
A thousand times we needed you,
A thousand time we've cried
If all our love could have saved you, dear,
You never would have died.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

HOW TO WRITE
A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday calls. Don't allow the reader to speculate

BIRTH PILL LINKED TO HEART ATTACKS

BOSTON (AP) — Two Harvard University experts say the risk of heart attack is so great that women older than 40 and younger women who smoke or have high blood pressure should not take birth control pills.

Dr. Brian MacMahon and Dr. Charles Hennekens issued the warning in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has proposed a revised labelling of oral contraceptives warning that use is not recommended in women older than 40 because of the increased risk of heart attacks.

Dr. Hennekens said a pattern of dangerous side effects has begun to emerge from studies compiled on women who take the pill.

"For women over 40, whatever the risks or lack of risks that may come out later, the evidence is enough for us to recommend that they not use the pill," Dr. Hennekens said. "Women under 40 should use it only in the absence of other risk factors (such as smoking)."

A series of studies conducted by different researchers shows that women who take birth control pills are three to five times more likely to die from heart attack than other women, the doctors wrote.

Younger women also should give up the pill if there are other factors that increase their chance of heart attack, the doctors said. Among these are cigarette smoking, high blood pressure and unusually high levels of cholesterol in their blood.

Americans Can Stay

VERNON (CP) — The director of the North Okanagan Health Unit said Wednesday he's received verbal confirmation from health minister Bob McClelland that four American nationals employed at the unit can remain in B.C. without taking out Canadian citizenship.

The matter came up a month ago when several Americans employed by the provincial government were told they would have to become Canadian citizens after three years, or forfeit their jobs.

Dr. Maxwell Smart said the policy will be tempered because there are no Canadians available to fill the positions at the health unit.

Fairgoers Get Tickets

If you're going to the Jaycee fair, walk, take the bus or taxi . . . or be careful where you park.

That's the message from Jaycee organizers who are upset over a rash of parking tickets handed out to fair patrons this week.

Parking has always been a problem for the Jaycees but this year the problem is aggravated by new apartment housing in the area and the resulting increase in number of "residential only" parking zones.

A spokesman for the Jaycees said efforts will be made to try to get the commissioners to relax their ticket-issuing until the fair ends this Saturday.

Baker's Dozen Seek Slice of Multi-Million Pie . . .

INDIANAPOLIS — A week-and-a-half ago, eccentric Marjorie Jackson was found murdered in her home her. Now, more than a dozen people are laying claim to the millions she left lying around in cash.

One man insists he's a relative because he has Andrew Jackson's duelling pistol.

Another person claims to be a "messenger for Jesus."

Police say $5 million was found hidden in garbage cans, toolboxes, drawers and a vacuum cleaner bag in the 66-year-old widow's home. Police believe the killers may have taken another $6 million.

Mrs. Jackson had no children and her will is invalid because it names her late husband as beneficiary. A stepsister, Roberta Koers, apparently is in the best position to become heiress, but the estate probably will be tied up in Marion County probate court for at least a year.

None of that has deterred the fortune seekers.

The Marion County sheriff's office has received more than a dozen letters from persons claiming possible relation to the woman and title to her money.

"I'm writing to claim the entire estate of Marjorie Jackson," a Michigan letter said. "The reason I'm claiming the entire estate is Jesus says I was a messenger for him."

Mrs. Jackson was deeply religious. Police said she meditated daily and gave birthday parties for God and Jesus Christ. Thousands of small, foilwrapped package fround in her home were addressed to God and Jesus "from Marjorie."

A woman who wrote from New York was convinced she was a distant cousin of Mrs. Jackson. She had checked her family tree and found that her grandmother's maiden name was Jackson.

Francis Freeney, lawyer for the estate, said one man from California read that Mrs. Jackson's husband, Chester, traced his lineage to President Andrew Jackson. The man said he, too, was a descendant of the former president.

BCR IN DARK ON CASH FLOW

VANCOUVER (CP) — R. D. Nelson, British Columbia Railway's chief financial officer, said Thursday that the railway is unable to tell where it makes or loses money.

Nelson blamed the railway's inability to provide the royal commission investigating its affairs with specific figures on the loss or profit of carload, passenger and trailer on flatcar services on a data-processing system that is full of irrelevant information.

"If you put garbage in, you get garbage out," he said.

Nelson, who assumed his position last July, said the financial and administrative department with a staff of 268 and $7 million budget is being reorganized. (See also Page 12).

"It is astonishing that this type of information would not be the first thing sought," said commission counsel Martin Taylor.

Nelson clarified statements made Wednesday by Mac Norris, B.C. Rail vice-president, in which he said the railway did not have an operating loss for the first quarter of 1977. The railway accumulated a $22 million operating loss in the three previous years.

The railway generated $22.7 million in revenue while expenses ran to $24.1 million during the first three months of the year leaving it with a deficit of $1.4 million, but Nelson said that if depreciation of $3.1 million was ignored, the railway generated $1.3 million in cash. He added that operating expenses were in the black only in March, 1977.

Meanwhile, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said despite reports of massive losses, construction on the B.C. Rail Dease Lake extension will not be restarted until the royal commission makes its recommendations.

Phillips said only history will tell if the decision was correct, but he said it has been made and that's that.

Contractors have told the commission $5 million could be lost by construction delays.

Phillips said that must be weighed against the $40 million to $50 million that could have been lost if construction continued.

WASH. LAW SPARKS WARNING

Laetrile Worthless: MD

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The president of the Victoria Medical Society said Thursday that moves to legalize laetrile in Washington state will inevitably be interpreted as endorsement of the so-called cancer drug.

But Dr. Norman Bailey said new laws don't change the fact laetrile is "utterly worthless" in treating cancer and he only hopes it will prove equally harmless to those who try it.

The substance, derived from apricot and other fruit pits, has been available in recent years from clinics in Mexico and Germany. People buying it are reported to have paid thousands of dollars for treatments the medical profession says do no good.

Federal laws in both Canada and the U.S. have kept laetrile out of both countries until now, when some states have been moving to legalize it.

In California, a bill to legalize it passed the state senate Thursday.

Supporters of the measure by Sen. William Campbell didn't endorse laetrile's curative powers but said the issue is freedom of choice.

"It's less harmful, for example, than tobacco, alcohol or junk food," said Sen. Arlen Gregoria. "The issue is ... a paternalistic, patronizing, pervasive regulatory government."

Campbell's bill would allow a doctor to prescribe the drug as long as there is no representation that it would cure cancer.

But another senator took the same position Dr. Bailer voiced in Victoria Thursday.

"Many people would believe that since the legislation has legalizezd laetrile, it must work," said Sen. Bob Wilson. "... We're creating a false hope for people."

In Washington state, Gov. Dixy Lee Ray said she will probably sign the Laetrile bill which passed the state house Tuesday.

She added that she would need to get other opinions on the bill once it reached her desk but is inclined to sign it because it has not been proved that the substance has any harmful effects.

'Propaganda' Row Ends Postal Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — New post office contract talks were short-lived Thursday when the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) walked out of a bargaining session, saying the government is bypassing union executives and going directly to the members with "propaganda concerning negotiations."

The union will not resume negotiations until the public service staff relations board rules on the union's right to distribute its own literature to mail sorters and postal clerks, Parrot said.

It was not known how long that could take.

"Today, the spokesman for the employer informed us that the employer would continue to distribute information concerning negotiations directly to our membership but would not allow the union's bulletins to be distributed because the post office premises are the property of the taxpayers."

Parrot said post office negotiators also told the union "that many of our demands are not negotiable."

"Given this attitude, we had no alternative but to leave the meeting this morning."

Technological change is a major source of contention, with CUPW demanding guarantees that its members will not be adversely affected by changes in the post office.

The union, which represents 23,000 inside workers, says it is not opposed to changes which will improve efficiency, but that its members must be protected.

Parrot said it is obvious the post office is not prepared to negotiate seriously.

CUPW submitted its proposals to the post office three weeks ago and the government has not yet formally responded.

CUPW wants the right to veto any technological changes unless agreement is reached between the two parties.

Mondale, Vorster At Odds

VIENNA (AP) — U.S. Vice-President Walter Mondale and South African Prime Minister John Vorster said today they had failed to agree on U.S. efforts to change South Africa's race segregation policies.

Mondale told a news conference that Vorster agreed during two days of talk here to help achieve black rule in South-West Africa and Rhodesia, but had stubbornly defended his government's policy of apartheid.

"We hope the South Africans will not rely on any illusions that the U.S. will in the end intervene to save South Africa from the policies it is pursuing," Mondale said, "for we will not do so."

Vorster, in a news conference immediately following Mondale's, said there is a "vital difference" in the U.S. and South African positions.

He claimed the United States wants to equate the position of the American negro with that of the black South African black and said: "This is where the difference comes in."

Vorster said the black South Africans were never slaves and have never been deprived of their nationality. He claimed blacks in his country have their own government and the right to vote.

N-Truck In Smash, Road Closed

LONDON (AP) — A truck carrying a 15-ton container of nuclear fuel bound for the U.S. hit three other vehicles and overturned Thursday on a highway near Winchester in southern England, but the radioactive material did not spill, authorities reported.

Police said five persons were injured in the mishap.

A second accident involving a nuclear fuel container occurred 85 miles to the east Thursday. A specially-designed railroad car derailed in Gillingham. It was empty at the time.

The truck was carrying uranium hexafluoride to Southhampton from Preston, Lancashire, for shipment to the U.S., the state-owned British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. said.

Police closed one mile of the road for three hours while fire chiefs determined that the 40-foot container had not leaked any of the material, which had been mined in the U.S. and purified in England.

Fire officials said it was the first accident of its kind in Britain.

A spokesman for the state-owned British Rail said the derailment in Gillingham was the second time in six weeks the same car had left the tracks at the same spot.

The spokesman said the 90-ton car and container, designed for transporting nuclear fuel and waste, derailed as the train moved slowly over a road crossing. He said no one was injured.

Though no harm came of it, the mishap, long feared by the nation's nuclearequipment industry, was expected to fuel the fire of opponents to nuclear power.

Ecologists are currently waging a campaign against government plans to enlarge the reprocessing plant at Windscale in northwestern England.

U.S. PRICES UP .8% IN MONTH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices in the U.S. jumped .08 per cent in April, the fourth straight month that food and energy costs have caused a strong inflationary surge, the U.S. labor department reported today.

The increase reflected an annual rate of 9.6 per cent, consistent with a trend that began in January.

Food prices soared 1.5 per cent, more than twice the March rate.

Other commodities rose 0.4 per cent and services climbed 0.8 per cent—exactly duplicating their performance in March.

Among April energy costs, fuel oil rose 0.4 per cent, coal was up 0.9 per cent and gasoline and motor oil prices jumped 0.6 per cent.

April's food price increase was smaller than the 2 per cent jump registered in February, when the U.S. was suffering the worst effects of the severe winter weather on southern farms.

Northern Carpenters Come First

EDMONTON (CP) — Residents of the Northwest Territories will get preferred hiring status for carpenters' jobs in the N.W.T. under a new collective labor agreement announced today.

This stipulation is part of the contract reached between the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Local 1325 based in Edmonton, and the Alberta Construction Labor Relations Association, representing the contractors.

"The agreement recognizes the needs of the Territories' residents and the special problems of the construction industry" in the N.W.T., said A. K. McCagherty, chairman of the contractors' association.

He said the N.W.T. government is conducting a carpenters' training program to supply a pool of local workers for the construction industry.

Bill Mackenzie, business representative for the local, representing 2,800 carpenters working in northern Alberta, said his union will set up an office and hiring hall in Yellowknife.

SEA BUS WINS

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Thursday theat the new Burrard Inlet ferry connecting Vancouver with North Vancouver will be called Sea Bus.

Curtis said John Gough, a North Vancouver man who suggested the name in a recent competition, will get a lifetime pass on the new service.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter is making a fundamental change in U.S. arms sales — the "burden of persuasion" henceforth will be upon those favoring the sale instead of opponents to the transaction.

The United States will limit future conventional arms sales to "our close friends" and other nations necessary to U.S. global security, Carter said Thursday.

Israel will be exempted from the new limits, Carter explained.

The United States, he said, will "remain faithful to our treaty obligations, and will honor our historic responsibilities to assure the security of the state of Israel."

From now on, Carter said arms sales will be made only to nations with which the United States has major defence treaties, including Japan, Australia, New Zealand and members of NATO.

Only "extraordinary circumstances" will alter that stand, he said.

The United States now has $22 billion in arms sales commitments pending, which will ake several years to fulfill, and those commitments will be honored.

But Carter said he plans to reduce sales as quickly as possible.

"Total arms sales in recent years have risen to over $20 billion, and the United States accounts for more than one half of this amount," he said.

Seniors Win Bus-Ferry Battle

Pacific Stage Lines has decided to quit arguing and give the senior citizens the free ferry ride advertised by the provincial government.

A company spokesman said the rate from Victoria to Vancouver will fall to $2.75 on June 1, from the present level of $3.50.

The rates for senior citizens are good from Monday to Thursday only. On other days they pay the full rate of $6.25, going to $5.75 on June 1.

The senior citizen rate has been a hot issue for months in Victoria because the promised free ride on the ferry has not been delivered. This is because the ferry charges the bus line for putting the vehicle aboard and this extra cost was passed along to the bus passengers, including the senior citizens.

This created a financial formula that became so complex that even Pacific Stage Lines officials on occasion confessed they couldn't work it out.

"Anyway, we are tired of arguing and we are going to give the senior citizen a free ride on the ferry starting June 1," a PSL spokesman said.

"That means $3 off the basic rate."

So the new cost for senior citizens is $2.75 effective June 1, which is $3 less than the basic $5.75 rate. (The ferry ride will cost $3, down from $4, effective June 1.

In the event the senior citizen drives to Swartz Bay and walks on the ferry, taking the bus from Tsawwassen to Vancouver, he will pay $1.70. The former rate was $1.30.

However, on the return trip, when he takes the bus from the Vancouver depot to Tsawassen the rate will again be $1.70. The old rate was $2.60.

Bus company officials have spent almost a year trying to explain the difference in the present rates and they have decided they would rather equalize them than continue the debate.

(For those who care, the difference is due to the fact the bus company was charged for driving on to the ferry but not for driving off. The different rates made sense to an accountant but were bewildering to the customers).

In general, the senior citizen can expect to pay the basic rate minus $3, except on Friday, Saturday or Sunday when he pays the full amount.

Jumpers Jittery

They Can Desert Their Ships But the Economy Is So Shaky They May Never Find Any Work

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Gerry Elliott doesn't have to read the unemployment statistics to know the economy is shaky.

It's a sure-fire barometer of the economy, says Elliott, manager of the Victoria immigration office. When things are booming and plenty of work around, desertions are high.

Right now the number is low, as low as Elliott has ever seen.

So far this year 27 seamen have jumped ship in B.C. — an average of six a month. Eight came off ships stopping at Vancouver Island ports. Of the 27, 18 are still at large.

In better times — economically speaking — desertions throughout the province averaged 30 to 40 a month.

John Ray, an immigration clerk with the shipping unit in Vancouver, says the most common reasons for desertions have traditionally been illegal offers of employment, dissatisfaction with shipboard life, and girlfriends, roughly in that order.

The job offers, says Ray, generally turn out to be low-paid and temporary. And, alas, most romances are fleeting.

Ray says besides high unemployment in the province there are two other factors that have contributed to the sharp decline in ship-jumping here.

"The ships are getting better," he said. "Most offer pretty good accommodation."

The other factor, he says, is the federal government's move last year to tighten the requirements on persons applying for social insurance cards.

Ray says by far the largest group of ship-jumpers are Greek. That's the case not only here but throughout United States and Canada.

East Indians and Chinese from Taiwan and Hong Kong are next.

They are followed by seamen from nearly every country in the world that has a merchant fleet, with some exceptions. Desertions off Japanese, Red Chinese, Russian and American vessels are rare.

Of the 27 ship-jumpers in B.C. this year, 12 were Greek, three East Indian, four Chilean, two Yugoslavian, two British, one Chinese, one Iranian, one Panamanian and one Irish.

Ray says he doesn't know why there are so many Greeks jumping ship but suspects it may have something to do with the fact there is still conscription in Greece, and youths must serve time with either the armed forces or merchant marine.

"Most of the jumpers are young kids," he says. "It's the first time they've been away from home and perhaps they don't find shipboard life that good.

"They arrive in port, go into a Greek restaurant, hear how easy it is to jump, and, I guess, decide to give it a whirl."

The immigration branch has 10 investigators in Vancouver whose full-time job is tracking down ship-jumpers.

Persons who jump here are caught in Montreal and vice versa, he says.

Some deserters cross the line. A Yugoslavian who jumped ship in Vancouver in February turned up in Seattle a month later — married to an American woman.

Desertions are more than just a pain to immigration officials.

They are a costly nuisance to the shipping companies.

If he is, the company must pay all costs related to the deserter's capture, court costs, legal fees, and return the errant seaman back to his native home, providing a ticket — one way.

Food Runs Cut Off

The human resources ministry is cutting off funds to a Greater Victoria volunteer delivery service that brings groceries to the doors of people unable to shop themselves.

Ruth Albertson, president of the Vancouver Island Mobile Community Food Service society, said today she was informed two days ago the funding will end on July 1.

"We don't know what the reason is. The notice came out of the blue, but I can tell you we're going to fight with all we can."

The service, operated with a converted school bus, began in 1972 as a Local Initiatives Project. Human Resources took over funding two years later and last year gave the group $1,161 a month.

Mrs. Albertson said the bus delivers groceries to about 150 senior citizens on a regular basis as well as up to 190 Indians on three Indian reserves in the Greater Victoria area.

"Most of the people who use the service can't shop themselves," she said. "A number are blind, crippled or elderly."

The bus makes door-to-door deliveries Tuesday through to Saturday and utilizes the services of 14 volunteers of whom nine are disabled and three on welfare.

A spokesman for the human resources ministry said an evaluation study of the service carried out last month recommended cutting off funds.

The spokesman said the group is not operating properly under the Societies Act, has no record of meetings for the past two years and is not providing any nutritional advice to Indians as was intended when the society was formed.

Mrs. Albertson, however, said, she had no knowledge of any provision to give nutritional information.

"They sent out a man who spent only a week with us. How can anyone evaluate anything in such a short length of time.

"It's just not fair."

'West Harbor' Plans Unveiled By B.C., City

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government and the city of Victoria have unveiled a long-term development plan for 68 acres of industrial land on the west side of the Inner Harbor.

Envisaged is a revitalized area, to be known as Harbor West, which would include housing porjects, a major waterfront park, marina and museum.

The plan was announced Thursday at a press conference attended by Housing Minister Hugh Curtis, Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf, MLA for Victoria, and Victoria Mayor Mike Young.

Curtis said there would be no immediate start in the area but rather the Hargor West development would be phased in over a period of about 10 years.

He said it would likely be three years before the first home is ready for occupancy. He though the land would ultimately house about 2,500.

The minister said about 45 of the 68 acres involved is government-owned, and another 22 acres is in private hands, the major shareholder being Canadian Pacific Railway.

The city of Victoria will service the land and the province will provide interim financing. Any surplus received from the sale of the land will be shared between the two governments.

Young said he feels a development like Harbor West is the direction in which the city should be going.

He said the transformation of the industrial area would be done over "a protracted period" but hoped the city could get a modest start within a year.

"It's a pretty fair project for a little bird like Victoria," Young said. "We will be taking it in bite-size chunks."

The area is split in two by Esquimalt Road with a section of the eastern portion assigned to contain about 250 units of family housing and a southern section designed for 800 to 1,000 units of "adult-oriented housing."

Both Curtis and Young pointed out that existing plans are not frozen and no development can go ahead until there has been ample opportunity for the public to submit ideas.

Young said the city may allow corner stores and a hotel in the area.

Curtis said there would be limited commercial development and the idea was to provide mixed housing.

Young said one major obstacle in developing one section of the proposed area was the existence of the oil tank farm.

Artists' drawings show the tank farm area to be the proposed location for a new waterfront park.

Young said the existing leases held by the oil companies expire between 1981 and 1987 and he expected the tanks would all be moved during that period.

He said the regional district is examinging other locations for the tanks.

The Harbor West plan calls for the transformation of the old E and N roundhouse into a musum on transportation, science and technology.

Bawlf said there are only two such roundhouses left in B.C., the other being in the False Creek area of Vancouver, and it was going to be torn down.

CRASH KILLS DRIVER

A 21-year-old Esquimalt man whose body was found Thursday night among some rocks off the Malahat Highway was identified today as Robert Wayne Hansen of 865 Glengarry Place.

Colwood RCMP said Hansen apparently had been driving towards Duncan when his car plunged off the highway three miles north of the Malahat Chalet.

Police are uncertain when the accident occurred. Hansen was last seen leaving work Monday afternoon.

Hansen's body was found by a passerby walking along the highway at 7:30 p.m.

The body was about 50 feet down an embankment. Hansen's demolished car was in dense bush about 150 feet further down the cliffside.

Bagpipe Welcome on Tuesday For First Alaska Cruise Ship

The P and O-Princess Cruises vessel will receive the traditional bagpiper's greeting when she arrives at 11 a.m.

The staff of the Victoria Visitors' Information Centre will present fresh flowers to women passengers and provide information on shopping and sight-seeing.

The Island Princess will leave at 4 p.m., bound for Juneau, Glacier Bay, Skagway, Sitka, Prince Rupert, Vancouver, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

After a similar 14-day cruise from Los Angeles, she will return here June 7. She will make Vancouver her base for nine eight-night Alaska cruises.

Vancouver will also be the summer base for the 17,000-ton Sun Princess, due to make 14 eight-night Alaska cruises.

Pacific Princess, sister ship of the Island Princess, will put in at Victoria six times this summer — June 20, July 4 and 18, Aug. 11, 15 and 29, making 14-night Alaska cruises, based in Los Angeles.

Ask the Times

Q. I have a Burpie pressure cooker and the spring in the safety valve is gone and the pressure will not build up past 10 pounds. I bought this pressure cooker in Canada and the book has no address for parts. Can you help me? I have gone to all the stores and they can't help. Mrs. B.

A. We tried several of the largest appliance repair shops and, like you, got nowhere. One place suggested trying "in the States," where the Burpie' cookers were made, but no address was available. Woodward's provided us with a Vancouver parts outlet: W. L. Wilks, 2955 West 11th Ave. They said it would be possible to fix your cooker, but with a complete safety valve assembly rather than repairing the old one. Burpie cookers have not been manufactured for a number of years, she said.

Q. I understand that because of strict anti-pollution measures taken in London that salmon are actually being caught in the River Thames. Is this true? J.B.

A. You're right. The Thames, once one of the most heavily-polluted major rivers in the world, now appears to be a haven for fish. In November, 1974, the first salmon caught in the river since 1833 was taken near a power station. The fish wasn't big by B.C. standards — 8 pounds 4½ ounces — but it's a start.

Wiring Blamed

A faulty electric wire is blamed for a fire that caused an estimated $300,000 damage to a commercial building at Government and Johnson Thursday morning.

Deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said today investigators traced the origin of the fire to a length of electrical conduit in a false ceiling above the Little Red Caboose restaurant.

He said the structure, built around the turn of the century, was so damaged by heat and flame it may have to be torn down.

The fire engulfed the restaurant and caused considerable smoke and water damage to the Central Station Cabaret, Bill's Smoke Spot, Tang tailors, China Cleaners and a small antique store.

UVic Asked to Help

Simon Fraser University — the institution chosen by the ministry of education to administer degree completion programs in B.C.'s interior — is looking for help from the Univeristy of Victoria.

"The specialized interests of the University of Victoria, including social work and public administration, should also be integrated into any non-metropolitan offerings," an SFU report released this week says.

The SFU suggestion to utilize UVic facilities is a reversal of the Winegard Commission report that left UVic out of providing programs for students in non-metropolitan areas.

It was a recommendation of the Winegard report that set Simon Fraser up as the hub for post secondary education in the interior.

SFU's preliminary plan suggests using sophisticated distance-learning techniques to give courses in isolated areas.

Carefully developed learning packages containing written and audio-visual materials will be used at home by the student, and would be regularly supplemented through small group tutorials with instructors at convenient central localtions.

The various university centres would offer programs administered by units known as "schools."

As well as the help from UVic, SFU says it looks to the Univeristy of B.C. for such professional programs as engineering, law and medicine and other extension courses.

"Show not designed to be weird or spooky. We will deal with psychic science in a very comfortable, common-sense manner."

CBC-TV TO INTRODUCE PSYCHIC PANEL SHOW

Television's first psychic panel show will be launched by CBC-TV at the end of next month. On the panel will be an astrologer, a palmist and a clairvoyant using only their psychic sciences to find out about the show's hidden visitors.

The first program is scheduled for Monday evening on June 27.

The half-hour show titled Beyond Reason is the summer replacement series for Front Page Challenge. Creator of the series is Allen Spraggett, well-known Toronto astrologer, radio and television personality and best-selling author of numerous books on psychic phenomena. Spraggett will be appearing on the 13-week series as the show's resident expert, awarding points to the panelists depending on their perceptiveness.

Moderator for Beyond Reason is Bill Guest — veteran CBC radio and television broadcaster from Winnipeg. He has hosted children's talent shows, public affairs programs, afternoon women's shows and is well known as the Quizmaster of CBC-TV's long-running collegiate quiz, Reach For The Top. A psychic panel show is going to be something different for Guest. He admits that he has "not been one for astrology, palmistry or clairvoyancy," but he has an open mind.

Beyond Reason is being produced by CBC-TV in Winnipeg. Elaborate plans have been made to keep the "hidden visitors" hidden from the panel during production.

"There will be no tricks", says Allen Spraggett. "Members of the panel will be separated in sound proof booths — they won't get any hints from each other. The astrologer gets each visitor's exact date and place of birth; the palmist gets only a palmprint and the clairvoyant, a personal object owned by the visitor."

There will be two "hidden visitors" in each show, and the panel will be changed from time to time. For the first show Vancouver astrologer Geof Gray-Cobb will be joined on the panel by palmist Marcel Broekman of New York and clairvoyant Irene Hughes of Chicago.

Producer Nigel Napier-Andrews — who produced and directed the CBC-TV series This Is The Law — says Beyond Reason is not designed to be "weird" or "spooky". "We will be dealing with psychic science in a very comfortable, common-sense manner", he said.

However, he did ask an astrologer for a horoscope for Beyond Reason using the first taping date as a birthdate. The prediction was fairly promising — "Born under the sign of Taurus, and Taureans are like avalanches — they tend to start slowly but once they get rolling nothing can stop them. A 'retrograde Mercury' may mean minor delays and technical problems, but these will be insignificant. The show's strongest astrological premise is a cluster of planets in the Fifth House of the horoscope, which represents among other things show business. Also Uranus, the planetary symbol of television, is conjunct with the horoscope's Ascendant. In the chart of a human being this indicates an exhilarating, electrifying personality that sweeps people off their feet."

The slow start and minor delay portion of the prediction has already come true — Beyond Reason was originally scheduled to start June 13, but due to pre-emptions has been delayed two weeks.

Millions Watch Program

CBC-TV's The Fifth Estate broke the two million audience mark with a moving and visually dramatic program on Tuesday, March 29, about facial deformities and a revolutionary form of surgery to correct it.

According to the CBC audience survey, record 2.11 million people tuned in to watch the item titled 'About Face,' making The Fifth Estate the second most popular Canadian program after hockey during the week of March 27. The enjoyment index for the program was also a recordbreaker, at 84 points (on a scale of 0 to 100).

Radio Series Revives Art of Reading Aloud

Reading aloud is a lost art that is being revived on CBC Radio's weeknight arts show, Nightcap. Starting Monday, May 30, the summer series of Nightcap presents novels at Night-time, read in instalments and abridged to provide cliff-hanging interest from night to night.

The first book on the summer agenda is the French-Canadian classic Thirty Acres by Ringuet. Canadian actor Terrence Ross reads an episode from the book in the second half of each show, over a three-week period, until June 17.

Thirty Acres is set in a farming community on the north shore of the St. Lawrence River, and covers a time period from the end of the 19th century to the late thirties.

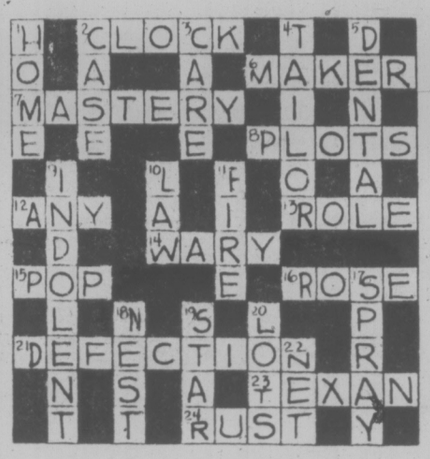
First published in 1938, Thirty Acres was an immediate success. It won the French Academy's Grand Prix du Roman and the Governor General of Canada's Award, and has been translated into German, Dutch, Spanish and English.

Portrait of Ringuet, a documentary on the French-Canadian author, will be presented on Thursday, June 2 in the first part of the show.

Other novels in the series are The Sole Survivor (June 20-July 1), a mystery novel by Roy Vickers, Oblomov (July 4-July 29), Ivan Goncharov's comic classic, published in Russia in 1857, George Orwell's Down and Out in London and Paris, and Vets Might Fly by the Scottish-born vet, James Herriot.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

6. MAKER not baker. The clue has the air of referring to manufactured products (as of a MAKER of one kind or another) without suggesting a baker specifically.
7. MASTERY not mystery. The idea of trying to impress the girl links up better with MASTERY. An air of mystery might well be put on to intrigue her, or perhaps amuse her.
12. ANY not ant. Most ant hills are so small that they would be almost unnoticeable and hardly "part of the scene." ANY fits better.
13. ROLE not rule. A mere word or two, possibly ad lib, would be only a minor alteration to an actor's ROLE. A governing body would hardly alter a rule without the aim of making a considered difference; also, one word (e.g., "not") could make a total alteration to the meaning of a rule.
14. WARY not warm. The unoptimistic nature of the clue's phrase: "may eventually" suit WARY better. A warm, friendly atmosphere is immediately promising.
15. POP not top. While the addition of "POP" suitably clarifies the term "recording star," "top" tends merely to duplicate the sense of "star" — a top performer anyway.
16. ROSE not nose or pose. That which is idealized is a subject (e.g., a ROSE), which a nose, or a pose, hardly is in itself.
21. DEFECTION not detection. The question of psychology relates particularly well to the explanation of behavior, e.g., DEFECTION. Detection is less directly apt.
24. RUST not rest. Beyond a certain point, a little more RUST may hardly seem to matter. The clue's theme of harmfulness doesn't suit rest so well.

CLUES DOWN:

1. HOME not Rome. "Is bound to notice" is too firm for Rome, which the man may have known only slightly, as a visitor, on one previous occasion.
2. CASE not cask. Specifying "wooden," in the clue, is unnecessary for cask and favors CASE.
3. CARE not cure. It is difficult to deny that costly medical CARE is expensive. On the other hand, an actual cure may be regarded as cheap at any price.
4. TAILOR not sailor. The clue's preoccupation with the hands links up more particularly with a TAILOR. One associates sailoring with general bodily activity.
5. DENTAL not mental. The clue implies that treatment may, on the other hand, be brief. DENTAL is favored, since it is difficult to imagine anybody having a few minutes mental treatment.
9. INDOLENT not insolent. As suggested, service can be slow and poor, or INDOLENT. Since work done for a customer can hardly be insolent in itself, the idea of insolent "service" rings less true; it would be a question of insolent treatment, say.
10. LAW not saw. Due to changing times, a LAW may become outmoded (or, it may still work quite well). It isn't the passage of time that reduces the effectiveness of a saw.
17. SPRAY not stray. The idea of random movment links up more necessarily with SPRAY, since one can stray in a definite direction, or towards a source of attraction.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Mrs. W. Tilley of Woodstock writes; I have become interested in 19th century Canadian silverware and notice a great similarity of design between items made by different manufacturers. Were there no copyright laws in those days?

I think you must be talking about silver plate rather than silverware as such. The manufacturers you are referring to are presumably Meriden of Hamilton, 1847 Rogers, Ontario Silver, Standard Silver and Simpson, Hall — to name a few. In fact, all these lines emanated from the Hamilton plant of the International Silver Company which opened in Hamilton in Sept. 1879. Within very few years they were flooding the market with both flatware and table utensils many of which were highly ornate and are today collector's items of a very high order. The multiplicity of brand names arose from the fact that early distribution was mostly through jewelry stores who were given 'exclusive' distribution of that brand — but the only difference was the trademark. The item itself would be identical to the one sold next door.

I dislike recommending books I have never read but I have noticed an ad for something called Rebuilding the Player Piano by Larry Givens. The price is $1.90 and it comes from Richardson Publications, P.O. Box 83, Station Z. Toronto. Ont. M5N 2Z3.

Mrs. D. Walton of London Ont. is collecting pin-cushion dolls and would like to know more about them.

I am always prejudiced in favour of little things as opposed to big things when it comes to collectibles; obviously it would be possible to arrange a beautiful collection of pin-cushion dolls on one buffet. They are rarely more than 4" high and always delightful They consist only of the torso and head and were very popular in the late 19th century. Some of them bear the names of the most distinguished of French and German dollmakers. Collectors often refer to them in three categories.

A. A single figure with arms molded to the body.

B. Figures with an opening between arm and body such as a hand on hip pose.

C. Figures with arms extended. The later are ususally the finest made, often requiring several molds and added decorations. These were the most carefully painted and should perhaps rank as figurines.

There is a book on this subject too — again, one I have not read. It is called China Half Figures by Frieda Marion, $9.50, published by J. Palmer, Box 663, Newburyport, Mass., 01950, U.S.A. Check first to make sure it is still in print.

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. On the last episode of "Rich Man, Poor Man — Book Two," did Rudy die? From the newscast they were playing after he was shot, they were talking about him being at a party. Also, will there be a third book?—E.B., Waupaca, Wis.

A. A spokesman for Universal Studios, where Book Two was filmed, said Rudy Jordache was killed off in the final episode. Peter Strauss, who played Rudy in the series, was not interested in any long term series and was reluctant to even participate in Book Two. Universal Studios said no final decision has been made on a Book Three but doubted seriously it would happen.

Q. I would like to know where I can write to the Kotter gang on "Welcome Back Kotter?" — K.T., Washington, Pa.

A. You might write to ABC Press Department, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Q. What ever happened to all the castaways of "Gilligan's Island?" — M.K. Mikweyauwega, Was.

A. When the series ran its course and was cancelled, Bob Denver and crew somehow managed to swim to safety, where they landed jobs in other films and series.

Q. What relation is Gary Crosby to Bing Crosby? Also, how old is Bing — O.M., Elkorn, Man.

A. Gary is one of several sons of Bing Crosby. The crooner, incidentally, was 73 on May 2.

Q. Why did the Sunday morning show "Make A Wish" go off the air? What is the host, Tom Chapin, doing now? Is he related to Harry Chapin?—B.K., Mt. Ephraim, N.J.

A. ABC says "Make A Wish" was taken off because it was felt the series had run its course. In addition, Tom Chapin wanted to do other things, mainly sing. He is currently making the concert round with his own show as well as a star in brother Harry Chapin's shows.

Q. I would like to know the name of the old Laura Horton on NBC's daytime series "Days of Our Lives." — D. H., Oroville, Calif.

A. I assume you're referring to Susan Flannery, who played Laura for a number of years. She left the series a year ago to go into movies. She was recently seen on the television mini-series "Moneychangers," where she played a poverty lawyer in love with banker Kirk Douglas. After she left "Days," Flannery was replaced for a short time by Susan Oliver. The role is now played by Rosemary Forsythe.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Rick Roberts, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

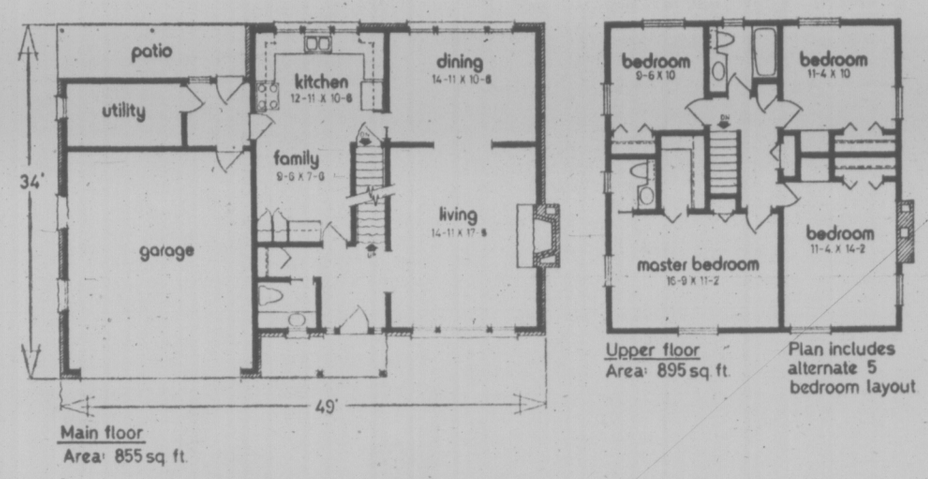
Home of the Week



PLAN Nº 65-1750
WIDTH: 49 ft.

Family Home with Country Kitchen

This home is designed for a growing family, with plenty of room for future expansion in the full basement.

An extended roof from the double garage gives protection from the weather and creates an ideal entrance to the lving areas. Off the main foyer are a guest powder room, main coat closet, door to the kitchen, stairs to the sleeping area and an archway to the living room.

The living room features a picture window at the front, which is duplicated at the rear in the dining room. The walls forming the arch between the two rooms could be eliminated to form one large room, or even better, an attractive room divider with built in shelves could be substituted. Of course, the dining area would still be situated close to the kitchen entrance. A cosy conversation grouping of furniture could be arranged around the wood-burning fireplace.

The family room and kitchen combined form a spacious "Country Kitchen", ideal for casual eating. The whole area can be controlled by mother from the kitchen sink. Cupboards and counter-top working space are more than adequate.

Beyond the kitchen is a back foyer which has exit doors to the double garage and the large rear patio. There is also a door to a sizable storage room which could easily be made into a workshop or utility.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Musical Switch Backed by Fans

By STEVEN H. SCHEUER

NEW YORK — When CBS finally allowed daytime performers a chance to sing and dance instead of their usual weeping and wailing act in last December's afternoon musical, "After Hours," fans responded to the winter bracer by giving the show a 29 share rating, which is viewed as promising in the daytime world of programming.

So, on Thursday, May 26, the network schedules a second "After Hours" affair, offering a brand new cast from CBC daytime shows. Out in Hollywood, producer John Conboy of "The Young and The Restless," was put in charge. He called upon David Hasselhoff from "Y and R," then brought in from the East Kathryn Hays of "As The World Turns," Tudi Wiggins and Michael Allinson of "Love of Life," Don Stewart of "Guiding Light" and Meg Bennett from "Search for Tomorrow."

The Easterners had not time for lolling in the sun, or slipping off to San Francisco. Canada's Tudi Wiggins managed a "Match Game" performance, and came away awed by everybody's cleverness. She hadn't been West in years, and was careful to wear a hat outside to shield that fine Canadian skin from the tropical sun rays.

Known to soap opera fans as wealthy, evil Meg Hart on "Love of Life," Tudi doesn't raise her voice or shoot a dirty look on the special. Miss Wiggins and Michael Allinson (Ian Russell of "Love of Life") sing a duet; Tudi offers an excerpt from "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie," one of her first stage performances on Broadway; and she joins a company production number of "Singing in the Rain."

As "Love of Life's" Meg Hart, Tudi can curl your hair with temper tantrum scenes. Definitely, after having portrayed Meg for 3½ years, the actress has the lady's number, but takes a sympathetic approach — "People like Meg are frightened of being alone."

PLOT PORTENS

Now that Mike is finally absolved of Jack's death on "Days of Our Lives" (NBC), Trish must face a second crisis — whether or not to have an abortion. Family pressure intensifies over the inter-racial marriage between Val and David, so those plans for the couple to go off to Washington, are in limbo. Yet Julie would be proud to have Val as a daughter-in-law. Medically, it looks bad for Tom, still in intensive care.

Fans of "Ryan's Hope" (ABC) — the long-awaited birth happens this week and the Ryan household is elated, although no one can convince Mary's husband Jack to go to the hospital at first Jack has a sudden change of heart, but his move ends on an unhappy note. An excellent birth sequence, involving the Le Boyer method of delivery, has been carefully researched and tastefully photographed.

Merle dresses up to visit Mary and then finds Dennis Foley got there first on "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." Miss Adeline suspects Merel is up to no good. Charlie and Tom ruminate over true love, and Foley tells Mary she can have her dreams.

Dan is all tied up in knots by Christina's desire to live alone on "All That Glitters." Peggy returns home to Walter. Glen leaves Andrea in a jealous rage, and L. W. meets with Jean Hamlin.

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

CARMEL, Calif. — The first time Paul Anka went to New York he was a kid and his collection of soap wrappers made the trip possible.

The next time he went, he was still a kid (only 16), and his collection of songs made the trip imperative.

Youngster though he was, he couldn't stay away from the big town where he was sure he'd sell some of his musical compositions and find his fortune.

Within three months of his second arrival in Manhattan, young Anka recorded a song he's written called "Diana" with such effect that it became a big hit, and he became a teen idol.

At 19, he was a millionaire.

But, at 20, he was very nearly a has-been.

Only the fact that Paul is genuinely gifted and not just a product of slick promotion saved him. Yet not even his gifts kept him from going through a period of depressing inactivity.

He's a solid nightclub attraction in Vegas and elsewhere, and a covey of his compositions such as "She's A Lady" which he wrote for Tom Jones and "My Way" which he wrote for Frank Sinatra are becoming standards.

He was in his Carmel home, which he shares with his Egyptian-born English wife and their four daughters, looking forward to his special when he turned to look back to the years of his meteoric rise to and temporary descent from stardom.

"No my parents didn't worry about me being in New York when I was so young, because they knew my character.

"It wasn't so hard then to get something recorded because the record industry was small. It was a tight little fraternity. Everybody had an open door."

Annette Funicello was mad about him, especially after he gave her a stuffed tiger (from a toy shop; not a jungle) and so were other girls everywhere; though they didn't have Annette's advantage of knowing him personally.

"It was difficult to compete with rock," he recalled. "I wasn't writing at all. However, I still felt that I wanted to be a part of the music world, so I never considered going into a totally different business like real estate or car sales."

Finally though, the public reacquired its taste for melodies, and Anka was back in style . . . bigger than ever because this time around he was applauded as a durable talent, not as a kid whose big ability was to turn on teen-age girls.

In answer to the complaint that there are still too few songs with tunes one can whistle, Anka argued, "More and more writers are getting back to melodies.

"However, there's such a blitz of records coming out these days, the good ones are sometimes so outnumbered by the bad that you just don't realize how many good ones are around.

"With 500 albums being released every week, not all the good songs get a lot of play."

Big star though he was at 16, Paul finished high school with a tutor at his father's insistence but he never went to college.

PAUL ANKA

"There was a time when I wanted to go to Juilliard," he admitted, "but no college experience could have equalled the life experience I've had.

"As a writer and singer, I've travelled, I've learned languages, I've met people and in general have acquired a range of knowledge I coudln't have gotten in classrooms."

If, as a result of his four-year slack period he'd never resumed writing music, Anka might have begun writing prose, because he's always been intrigued by journalism and by law, and, while he was a kid, won two awards for original short stories.

One of the good things about reviewing books is that every so often you find yourself reading the sort of book which no one ever reads straight through, but should. The most recent example to come to hand is Ken Mitchell's Horizon, Writings of the Canadian Prairie.

Horizon was probably designed as a textbook. (If not, its two lone footnotes — one defines a "quarter," the other a "coulee" — would have to be described as gratuitously insulting.) It contains selections from over 50 writers whose work has been influenced or nurtured by the Canadian prairie. As Mitchell puts it in his introduction, "(The Prairie) lives in people's minds even after they have left . . . for the creative writer the Prairie has become a symbolic place in the geography of the imagination, one that continues to evoke love and allegiance, as it inspires works of literature."

To read Horizon, then, is to share what can only be described as the Prairie Experience. No doubt this book will find its way into Canadian studies courses readily enough; one can only hope that the reading public will be as quick to appreciate its merits.

The book opens splendidly, with a wise and funny Piegan myth describing the creation of man. After the earth is flooded by the "Great Water," the "Old Woman" suggests to the "Old Man" that he re-populate it. " 'Your island is big and beautiful, but something's missing, says she. 'How about filling it up with some people?' 'That's fine by me,' said the Old Man, 'but I'll have the first word.' 'All right,' said the Old Woman. 'And I'll have the last word'."

This is followed by various nineteenth-century accounts dealing with Indian mores, the Metis Rebellion and pioneer settlement, with William Francis Butler, Paul Kane, Gabriel Dumont, Wallace Stegner and Barry Broadfoot among the contributors. Next come references to the war, Nellie McClung on women and suffrage, and Fredelle Bruser Maynard on Eaton's catalogue. ("Even the order form rises above mere commerce: on the reverse side, Eaton's offers a thought-provoking essay. 'Are You Getting Ahead?' Does money bring unhappiness? Perhaps not. Yet money poorly spent can bring unhappiness. . . .' It is, in short, a dissertation calculated to give prodigals second thoughts about that new beaded lampshade, and one can only admire the company's altruism.")

The legendary thirties are framed by two striking poems, "The Wind Our Enemy" by Anne Marriott, and "The Nineteen Thirties are Over," by Miriam Waddington. Between them Mitchell has included a short story which reminds us just how good a writer Frederick Philip Grove could be, a story by Sinclair Lewis, and the full text of a play titled "Still Stands the House," by Gwen Pharis Ringwood. It illustrates, more plainly than prose could ever do, the truth of Henry Kreisel's claim that, "It can be argued that in order to tame the land and begin the building, however tentatively, of something approaching a civilization, the men and women who settled on the prairie had to tame themselves, had to curb their passions and contain them within a tight neo-Calvinist framework."

Kreisel's essay and a story by Stephen Scobie, about horizontal as opposed to vertical ways of seeing and thinking, are especially intriguing, but there is more still. Margaret Laurence's story "The Loons," for example, will attract admirers of The Diviners. A short story by Edmonton writer Merna Summers is as neat a character study as you'll find anywhere. Paul Hiebert is here, and so are Eugene Cloutier on Western provincialism, John Newlove, Gabrielle Roy, George Ryga and W. D. Valgardson.

Missing are Bob Edwards, Norman Ward, Heather Robertson, Maria Campbell and Ken Mitchell himself. (His prize winning story, "The Great Electrical Revolution," most certainly should have been included.) And James M. Minifie's account, in Homesteader, of his father alone on the prairie and digging a well, would also have made a worthwhile addition.

The designer of Horizon deserves to be congratulated. He or she has arranged poems, illustrations and brief snippets of prose to set off the larger pieces and each other to what seems the best possible advantage. As a text, Horizon, Writings of the Canadian Prairie is both attractive and stimulating. As general reading, it should prove its worth as a holiday or bedside companion, and as a useful guidebook to future explorations.

Taped Trivia Just Teases

By AL FORREST

Instant history isn't what it used to be.

For one thing there are too many tape recorders around. For another thing, there are too many female writers.

Instant history used to be a high art form. A book by T. H. White (Making of the President) or by Peter Newman (on Diefenbaker, Pearson or whomever) would be tightly-written, in chronological order and illuminating.

Some of the more recent pieces of journalistic history have fallen far short of these standards.

For example, Convention, an account of the selection of Jimmy Carter as Democratic candidate for president, is an utter disaster. It is said it is written by Richard Reeves (who earlier wrote a biography of Jerry Ford) but in fact it is written by electronic means.

Reeves organized a team of more than 50 people who kept written or taped journals of events connected with the convention. On the floor of the meeting hall, there were seven assistants, all armed with tape recorders.

The finished product is like listening to all seven tape recorders turned on at once. The book is a collection of trivia, an unending stream of unconnected incidents, with no other purpose than to reflect the color of the campaign.

For example, the book opens with the rush to interview Clare Smith, who at 17 was the youngest delegate. The book reports that she at first was interested with all the attention but later got bored with it. End of item.

"I don't like Swiss cheese," Strauss said.

How Jimmy Won, by Kandy Stroud, is a bit better. It at least attempts to tell the story of Jimmy Carter's rise to power, but it is only partially successful.

It's main shortcoming is that it was written by a girl. Kandy Stroud is the Washington correspondent for Women's Wear Daily and while she isn't obsessed with fashions, she does like to chatter on about personalities.

(To understand Jimmy Carter you have to know Sam, an old black gentleman who lived in Plains, Georgia. Sam's grandfather was a fascinating man whose hobby was collecting coins and his grandfather's uncle did the funniest thing with a butterfly net.)

The closest she comes is a quotation from a rival condidate, Mo Udall, who says:

"I really didn't believe that just sheer will-power and determination to be president could do it, that you could handshake and smile your way into serious contention for the nomination. But his strategy has been brilliant."

Having thus answered the question she poses in the title, she returns to her personality profiles and interviews. Like most women she is unable really to write about anyone other than herself. Much of her book is concerned with the difficulties she has getting a sandwich or a beer on the Carter press bus or complaining that some other woman has received a good story by sleeping with one of the Carter campaign workers.

While her book is a disappointing effort, it has some redeeming value. Her interviews with Carter, quoted near the end of the work, add some insight into his character.

However, she seems to be best suited for this kind of personal stuff in interview form. It is hardly a style that can successfully carry a whole book that attempts to report on an historical event.

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

It is always exciting to be in at the birth of a novelist of outstanding merit. And it is doubly rewarding when one can confidently predict that the first novel of such a writer is no flash-in-the-pan effort, but the precursor of even better things to come. The as-yet unknown writer who has kindled my interest is Jan Webster, and the title of her exceptionally fine novel is Colliers Row.

Before I tell you about this novel I should like to say a word about its author and how publication came about. Most publishers are knee-deep in unsolicited manuscripts but, in this instance, what came "over the transom" was a brief, intriguing letter inviting a request to read an unusual work.

It turned out that the writer was no starry-eyed tyro. Jan Webster, a Scottish lady of fifty-three, had been through the mill. Having grown up during the Depression in Blantyre, the heart of the Lanarkshire coalfields, where both her grandfathers worked at the pits, she managed to acquire a sound education to equip herself for a career in journalism, first in Kelso, then in Glasgow, and finally in London.

A cursory glance at the manuscript would have told the publishers that Jan Webster had a considerable knowledge of recent Scottish, English and American social history, of ships, art, and a dozen other subjects. But what must have delighted them most was that she is a born researcher and a writer of uncommon ability.

The upshot was agreement to publish, not only the completed novel, but two more, to complete a trilogy — an almost unheard-of compliment to an unknown author at any time, but these days, when in most large publishing houses the sterile thinking of cost accountants and market researchers is allowed to over-rule editorial judgment, the decision was astonishing. I salute the publishers for their prescience and daring.

The daring refers to the decision to commission two further books; it didn't require any courage to decide to publish Colliers Row, for if ever a novel came out of the blue with "best-seller" written all over it this is it.

Colliers Row is a Scottish saga which movingly chronicles the lives of Kate Kilgour and her children during the period 1840-80. Kate is housekeeper to a minister of the Free Kirk in Greenock, but gossip compels James Galbraith to give her notice, even though his heart cries out against it.

And so begins the twists of fate that are to link Kate to a wealthy pit-owning family and to a miner in the Lanarkshire pits; that take her children overseas to America and New Zealand; to see a socialist son run for parliament, a daughter marry a Tory MP, and another daughter qualify as a doctor; and to bring Kate herself in time of crisis back to James Galbraith's side.

The Scots Jan Webster portrays are nothing like the repressed kirk-goers of popular fancy. In 1850, we learn, Glasgow was full of whisky shops and brothels, with the surrounding countryside tilled by laborers who were encouraged to have unmarried "followers" for the sake of the cheap labor that meant.

Yet in Fife miners had an eight-hour day before any other pit workers, ten times more children had a secondary education in Scotland than in England, and six times as many went to university. Cholera was a scourge, pit safety was rudimentary, yet divorce was enlightened and humane.

As they grow up, Kate's children experience all these contrasts in an age of contrasts which serves as the backdrop for this superbly constructed novel.

Colliers Row reminded me somewhat of A. J. Cronin's early novels; it has the heartwarming and courageous element and the fine sweep of drama that was to be found in, say, The Stars Look Down.

John Galsworthy and R. F. Delderfield enjoyed writing sagas, though both were more at home in a higher social strata, and C. P. Snow also has the facility for telling an expansive tale. But these, and similar authors, are noted for spreading their material thinly. Their fame rests on their ability to write a whole series of books on the same theme and retain reader interest despite the use of a vast amount of "padding."

Jan Webster's forte is condensation. There is no "padding" in Colliers Row. Every word counts. Information is imparted strictly in context. The lives of the characters are the thing and the author never permits herself the luxury of engineering the story in order to go off on some pet tangent.

For instance, she mentions the bride ships which came to Victoria and a girl who ended up on Salt Spring Island. She has undoubtedly visited Salt Spring Island to see her brother-in-law, well-known Canadian broadcaster Jack Webster, and the temptation to dwell on this part of the world (instead of New Zealand, where bride ships also went) must have been great. She resisted it. Victoria receives a single paragraph, strictly in context.

The result of this disciplined style of writing is that every page is replete with action and drama. The reader is waltzed from the grim depths of a coal-mine to the rigors of sailing in a clipper to China; from dire poverty to affluence, from politics to art, from religion to doubt, from despair to joy, and from hatred to love. And so cleverly does the author juggle her characters, who are often oceans apart, that none is ever out of the reader's mind.

Colliers Row is the kind of novel one wishes would last for ever and yet demands to be read at a single sitting.

It is evident that a lifetime's study and experience has gone into Colliers Row, and it must have taken a long time to write and polish. It remains to be seen whether the author can work as well under pressure and maintain the quality in her next two books, one that will take the story from 1890 to 1920, and the concluding volume which will bring the lives of Kate's descendants down to the present day.

I feel confident that a writer of such discipline, such power, such integrity, and such distinction, will not falter under pressure. I say this because Jan Webster has intuitively understood what the late Lionel Trilling averred: "The novel, then, is a perpetual quest for reality, the field of its research being always the social world, the material of its analysis being always manners as the indication of the direction of a man's soul."

HOWE . . . a common ordeal

Hit by Onslaught of History

By JULIAN REID

Like any really outstanding historical study, Irving Howe's World of Our Fathers transcends the nominal bounds of its subject matter — in this case, the now-dying culture of New York's East Side Jewish community — to find in local particulars a universal significance. The theme here is history itself: for the profoundly human ordeal Howe's immigrant forebearers were compelled to undergo is a dramatic instance of the common ordeal of Western man in coming to terms with the impersonal forces which have combined to shape our present industrial era.

Back in their East European homelands, these immigrants had dwelt in a historic backwater — the "shtetl," a rural slum virtually untouched by the currents then sweeping the larger world "beyond the Pale." Isolated from contemporary culture by their tradition-ridden faith and their distinctive Yiddish language, by centuries of oppression and by the "backward agricultural economy" into which they were locked, these Jewish communities were worlds unto themselves.

Into this dreamy otherwhere, the onslaught of history erupted brutally in 1881. That year Czar Alexander II was assassinated; in reprisal, the Russian authorities launched a wave of anti-Semitic pogroms. For Jews, long resigned to gentile oppression, this was nothing new; but combining as it did with a steadily worsening economic situation, for many it was the last straw.

From afar, dimly glimpsed, beckoned a new Promised Land — America. Inexorably the vision drew them — the young, the ambitious, all those who had not yet been ground down into a state of weary passivity. Fired with vague hopes, in their thousands and tens of thousands, they embarked upon a new Exodus.

By the 1920s, when U.S. authorities finally called a halt to immigration, more than two million Jews had made the onerous journey from the Old World to the New. It was a journey not merely through space but through historical time — from rural feudalism into urban industrialism in a single leap. Into a few crowded generations, the "Chosen People" packed the entire burden of a social transfiguration which, for Western Europeans, had been the work of centuries.

Amidst the "fierce congestion" of the East Side — "a gray, stone world of tall tenements," observed one witness, where "all looks sad" — the newcomers struggled to regain their bearings. Conditions here were in many ways harder than those of the "shtetl." Indeed, the characteristic atmosphere of the New York ghetto, as the gentile journalist Hutchins Hapgood perceptively described it, seems painfully reminiscent of the forced-labor camps of later eras. "It wears away the unnecessary," Hapgood testified, "calls aloud for essential humanity." And its culture was marked by the distinctive stamp "of the human being who has reached the 'limit' and is therefore reduced to fundamental ideas."

This irrepressibly human "culture of 'Yiddishkeit'" is Howe's central concern. Like any author deeply immersed in his subject, he treats it at excessive length — World of Our Fathers could benefit from a few dozen pages with of judicious pruning. Nevertheless, the characteristic raw vigor of the East Side comes overwhelmingly through.

"The central premise of Jewish survival," Howe asserts, "is a defiance of history" — as, indeed, is that of any people that wishes to cling, amidst the global melting-pot of our century, to a sense of its heritage and its collective roots. But such defiance can be carried only so far. And so, inevitably, Howe's chronicle is tinged with a bittersweet nostalgia — for the transplanted blossom of "Yiddishkeit" was sadly short-lived.

"For about thirty or forty years," he writes, "a mere moment in history, the immigrant Jews were able to sustain a coherent and self-sufficient culture. It was different from the one they had left behind, despite major links of continuity, and it struggled fiercely to keep itself different from the one they found in America, despite the pressures for assimilation. Between what they had brought and half preserved from the old world and what they were taking from the new, the immigrant Jews established a tense balance, an interval of equilibrium."

But that precarious equilibrium was soon overthrown, as a new generation forsook its mother-tongue and committed itself to the English language and the brassy materialism that went along with it. The present-day descendants of the East European immigrants remain, for the most part, self-consciously Jewish, but whether, like their forefathers, they can succeed in reaching at least a temporary accommodation with history without being forced to sacrifice the vital sense of their continuity with their spiritual heritage, only time can tell.

A Lucky Man plays Back Himself

By JOHN LEONARD

It was five days after Christmas 1973, in an apartment two blocks away from the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago. Outside, the wind off the lake was knocking people down. Inside, a motley mixture of malcontents — journalists, of course, who complain more than baseball players — had finished a late breakfast and an inordinate amount of a compound of Curacao and lemon juice. We were arguing about whether A. J. Liebling had been everything he was cracked up to be. Then Studs Terkel, who had brought along a bottle of brandy for the ride, began to talk.

I almost missed my train, which would have been fine since it was 10 hours late leaving the station, and never did get to New York, and Studs Terkel is a lot more interesting than Indiana and Ohio. His talk went from Liebling to Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht, from "The Front Page" to the Wells Grand Hotel, from Al Capone to Joe McCarthy. There should have been a microphone. This was a radio man, an ambulatory segue, an interior monologue smoking a cigar. Which came first, anyway, radio or James Joyce? The night holds no terrors for those who can talk their way through it, telling stories in the cave.

"Talking to Myself" picks up almost where I left off. If, in "Division Street: America," "Hard Times" and "Working," he was listening to other people, here, at age 65, he is playing back himself. It is a marvellous and maddening book — marvellous, because we get to know the stout-hearted Terkel; maddening, because having gotten to know him we want more, and he won't give. What appears random, a turning of the self on and off like a radio, is really quite artful, even evasive.

"There is a private domain," he says, "on which I'll not trespass, nor does it, I feel, matter very much to others." He doesn't trespass, but it does matter. He skimps on the personal facts the greedy modern reader has come to feel entitled to. Why didn't he ever use his law degree from the University of Chicago (Class of '34)? Whatever happened to his older brother Ben? When did he meet his wife, Ida, and what's she like? Tell us about the blacklist. How did his mother get into the hotel business in the first place? Who were his parents? This is pretty much the sum total of what he tells us about his parents:

"My mother walloped Ben one evening in the spring. He had been late and missed supper . . . His head struck the chair and he bled slightly. My father clutched him to his breast and, in one of his rare moments of anger, told her off good. My mother lay her back against the wall mirror and, in one of her rare moments of silence, trembled."

And about his politics, that left-wing quixotism that involved him in more causes than there was room for on the attorney-general's list, this is as much as he's prepared to say: "I had been, from boyhood on, influenced, and not for the better, by certain dirty old men living at the hotel, who constantly favored me with little nickel blue books: writings of Eugene V. Debs, Clarence Darrow, Thomas Paine, Bob Ingersoll, Upton Sinclair, Voltaire, that bunch."

Well, it's his book, not mine, and he wants to pretend he's been more of a spectator and less of an actor than is actually the exuberant case. We'll have to make do with his enthusiasms. He tracks them down with his trusty Uher tape-recorder. They range from Ivy Compton-Burnett to Big Bill Broonzy. The motion of the book, in fact, is from Compton-Burnett's cool-eyed cynicism to Broonzy's blues. She is quoted at the beginning of the book: "Life is merely the mounting block" for art. He is quoted near the end:

"How many things can you do with a knife?" he asks Terkel. "You can cut fish, you can cut your toenails. I seen men shave with it, you can eat beans with it, you can kill a man. There. You name five things you can do with a knife, you got five verses. You got yourself a blues."

It is a nice motion, not in the least bit random. Studs Terkel knows exactly what he's doing. Along the way from the mounting block to the blues, we are introduced to Bertrand Russell, Mahalia Jackson, A. S. Neill, Danilo Dolci, Bernadette Devlin, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Alan Paton, Joan Littlewood, Federico Fellini, Billy Rose and so on. They aren't important. As reported here, although Terkel obviously wouldn't agree, Russell and Fellini between them seem to have cornered the market on cliches. Give me Frank Midney, the Mayor of Bughouse Square: "If brains was bedbug juice, you couldn't drown a nit."

Important are "the hall room boys" to whom the book is dedicated, the autodidacts in and around the Wells Grand Hotel who slipped him the nickel blue books, the ward men like Prince Arthur and the gamblers like Red Kelly, One-Arm Cholly and Civilization, the petty gangsters and the old-time radio stiffs. "Talking to Myself" is a love letter to them, a sign-off by a disk jockey who plays their records, their sinew, in his mind.

What a lucky man Studs Terkel seems to be. If "the imp of the perverse had me on the hip," he survived, unlike many of the American Left, to wisecrack and be consecrated as a kind of culture hero while the mike's still open. He compares himself once to Richard Nixon: "I tape therefore I am." But whereas one disk jockey in the middle of the night was listening to himself, the other was listening to Mahalia Jackson.

TERKEL . . . sign-off

Chewed-over Cheever a Letdown

By JACK SCOTT

It was kind of like opening that special, surprise gift, the one you've pretty thoroughly investigated on Christmas Eve in the hall closet.

There simply were no discoveries and, hence, very little enjoyment in reading John Cheever's new novel, Falconer. The blame rests solely with 10,000 book reviews.

Well, maybe not 10,000. But every major newspaper from The New York Times on down, plus Time, Newsweek, Saturday Review and almost every other magazine with a book section had drssected, analyzed, digested, probed and prodded at this best seller with the result that there was very little left when the book was finally opened.

True, this is unforgiveably late after its publication date, but there was a certain priority with other, unread books and, anyway, Falconer was read when the damage had been done. True, Cheever's novel has attracted near-saturation interest (probably never before has there been such a heavily-reviewed book), but that is substantially true of all best sellers and, right or wrong, it has all but taken away every joy of reading for the Johnny-Come-Latelies.

The plot, such as it is, the symbolism, a great deal of the actual narrative, every quotable quote, a description of each character, Cheever's wittiest lines (says the bitchy wife, visiting her husband in prison. "It's nice to have a dry toilet seat"), even the denouement — it's all been spelled out long in advance by the vultures assigned to tell us readers what, hopefully, we may find out for ourselves.

No average reader, indeed, will crack Falconer without the dismal awareness of what it is all about or without a more-than-nodding aquaintance with its central character. Just, as they say, for the record: Ezekiel (known as "Zeke") Farragut — Number 734-508-32; 48-year-old socially-prominent Episcopalian college professor; heroin drug addict now weaned to methadone; jailed for the murder of his brother, Ebenezer, who richly had it coming to him. The plot: Farragut's experiences, a great many of them carnal, in the Falconer State Correctional Institute. But you knew that, unless you've been away or sick.

It has all been spelled out in everything but alphabetical blocks in every review. The big surprise ending? All familiar to Constant Reader since not only Farragut's lover, a young inmate named Jody, escapes, but Farragut becomes, himself, at the book's end, free of his drug dependency and his cell. And you knew that, too.

Perhaps Cheever did plan this ending as a miracle of resurrection (as John Gardner says in the Saturday Review), but with so much advance notice it can hardly be called a revelation. This may be the moment of truth, but the truth has already been forecast.

There is not surprise, either, in the delination of the strange characters who people Cheever's novel — the bragging, pathetic Chicken Number Two, Tiny, the massive guard, who massacres the prison cats because one of them stole his dinner, and the rest — simply because they've been too dam'd much written about.

Thus the dilemma of a devotee of John Cheever, probably one who has so much enjoyed his previous short stories and novels (Bullet Park, The Wapshot Chronicle and The Wapshot Scandal) and is certainly anticipating the fourth one.

Cheever may, indeed, have written a fine book ("An American masterpiece," Newsweek called it; "A novel of genuine and disturbing power," said Christoper Lehmann-Haupt in the New York Times; "An extraordinary work of art," decided Gardner), but the reader's own estimate will be warped and distorted if he already knows such opinion. Beyond the simple enjoyment of Cheever's writing he may never arrive at an independent verdict.

What can be done about this is another matter. Perhaps the only answer is to get every book before it has been reviewed or, failing that, to read the reviews after the book. That, of course, eliminates the main function of the reviewer, to say whether or not a work is worth buying; but Falconer certainly demonstrates that too much of a good literary thing can be downright suffocating.

This reviewer found Falconer somewhat of a letdown, but all that pre-digestion can dull any appetite.

Happiness Hang-Over

By DON VIPOND, Times Staff

He admits to being somewhat hung over today but says it's a "pleasurable" sort of suffering.

"I took some dear friends out for some drinks but they wouldn't let me buy a bloody thing," he explains.

And in another week he's off on a European holiday — "France, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Spain — maybe we'll go to Greece." He booked the tickets Friday and plans to be gone about a month.

If all this doesn't sound like your ordinary out-of-work carpenter, Owen Gyte isn't. He's a winner.

He missed the televised drawing of winning tickets in the Western Express lottery draw Wednesday, something he usually catches because he always buys two of the $1 tickets.

So Thursday he phoned as he has before to have the winning numbers read to him from the local lottery office.

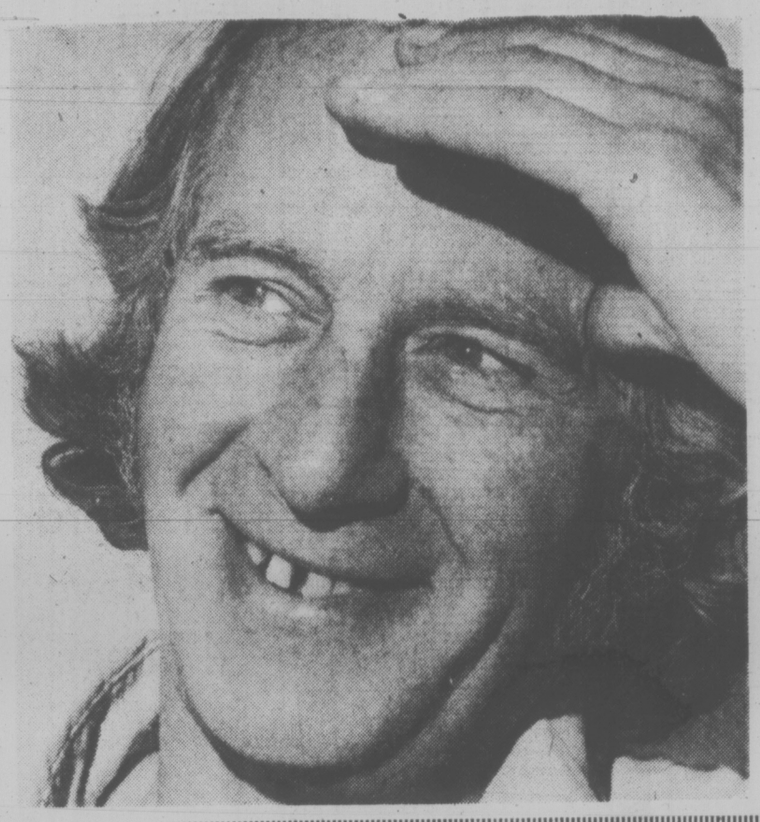
The little slip of paper was suddenly worth $100,000.

Gyte, who is 44 and lives at 170 Beach Drive, moved to Victoria from Midland, Ont., almost three years ago.

When he gets back from his holiday he intends operating a little carpentry business with a friend which he had just got under way before this week's developments.

In fact, he said, he's off to work today right after coffee and corn flakes — "if I can keep them down."



LEYLAND LETTER FORGED

LONDON (Reuter) — A British Leyland executive has admitted forging a letter saying the company used "special payments" to secure orders for its vehicles.

The letter, containing spelling errors and several other mistakes, bore what was supposed to be the signature of Lord Ryder, head of the government's National Enterprise Board (NEB).

But today, Scotland Yard detectives were questioning Graham Barton after his confession to The Daily Mail, which on Thursday printed the text of the letter.

The newspaper defined the "special payments" as bribes and the letter was supposed to show government connivance in handouts abroad.

Barton said he committed the forgery to "gild the lily" on what he believes is a national scandal. "Naturally I regret that my enthusiasm got the better of me and that I have perpetrated this fraud," he told The Daily Mail.

The Leyland case was based largely on the letter and an internal report written by Barton, who urged strict controls on Leyland payments overseas.

It embarrassed the government, coming soon after Prime Minister James Callaghan pledged with other nations at the economic summit in London to stamp out international corruption.

There was an uproar in Parliament, with Industry Secretary Eric Varley calling Lord Ryder back from a Mediterranean vacation and ordering the National Enterprise Board to begin an inquiry, which is continuing.

But shortly before Barton's admission, Leyland broke its silence to issue a statement denying that any money went to unauthorized individuals.

David English, editor of The Daily Mail, said in a Page 1 statement today: "I wish to apologize unreservedly to Lord Ryder, Mr. Eric Varley and Mr. Park (Leyland chief Alex Park). I deeply regret that the Daily Mail was misled into publishing a forgery in the course of its investigation."

Blais Fears Post Strike

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada could face a postal strike this summer or fall, Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais said today.

"If not this summer, maybe sometime later on this fall," Blais said in an interview with Standard Broadcast News.

"We're hopeful that we will be able to reach a settlement by the 30th of June, but if not, the union would be in a strike position after a conciliation board had submitted its report," Blais said.

The present contract with the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, signed in December, 1975, after a 42-day strike, expires June 30. There have been several disruptions of service since the signing and the CUPW broke off negotiations on a new contract Thursday.

Blais said the CUPW has refused to co-operate in efforts to settle disputes through a union-management group he established.

"We've managed with three of the four unions," Blais said, "but CUPW has . . . said to us 'Look you fellows, we're going to confront you and we're damned if we're going to put our feet under the same table and take coffee from you and fraternize in any way.'"

The postmaster-general said he will not follow the approach of his predecessor, Bryce Mackasey, and personally take part in the negotiations.

"If I'm there, there is a constant focus of public attention on the post office's labor negotiations," Blais said. "And that's what I want to avoid.

Blais said the post office must settle its recurring labor problems. "If we don't, I don't hold very much hope for the post office as a viable institution," he said.

TOQUE-CLAD BANDIT GETS $1,400

Police said today there have been no arrests.

The man, in his mid-20s, entered the Cook and Fort Street branch of the Royal Bank about 4 p.m. and passed a note demanding money to a teller. No weapon was displayed.

He ran off with $1,385 but police said he took off his toque as he left the bank, enabling some people to see his face.

It was the 44th such incident in Greater Victoria this year but the first in almost a month.

Soviets, U.S. Reach Breakthrough on SALT

GENEVA (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance announced today he has reached a general agreement with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on a "common framework of a new treaty to limit nuclear weapons."

Summing up his three days of talks with Gromyko, Vance told reporters the two superpowers devised a three-tiered approach that may impose temporary restraints on the U.S. Cruise missile and the Soviet Backfire bomber.

But Gromyko emphasized that "major, serious difficulties still remain and a great distance still has to be achieved."

As the two top negotiators departed, Gromyko charged that the United States "has not given up its attempts to achieve unilateral advantages" in a new weapons treaty, "nor has the United States given up its attempts to undermine the security of the Soviet union."

Vance, too, emphasized that "substantial differences remain between the two sides of a number of issues" before a final treaty can be drafted and submitted to the U.S. Senate.

Vance said further negotiations will continue in Geneva, at the ambassadorial level in Washington and Moscow and at another meeting with Gromyko at a time and place to be decided.

Restraints on the U.S. Cruise missile and the Soviet Backfire bomber have been the key issue blocking a new treaty — SALT II — to replace the five-year-old strategic arms limitation talks agreement, which expires Oct. 3.

The new agreement would also include reductions in both countries' weapons arsenals and a commitment to begin negotiating further reductions once the new treaty expires in 1985.

Vance said the framework accepted by the two sides includes a treaty, a three-year "protocol," and a "statement of conduct" that will pave the way for negotiations on a third weapons agreement.

On the Middle East, the other topic of discussion, Vance said both sides agreed the Geneva peace conference should be reconvened in the fall and would "work to that end."

Len Guy Loses Out On NDP Post

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gerry Stoney, president of the New Westminster local of the International Woodworkers of America, was elected a labor caucus choice for the executive of the B.C. New Democratic Party at its annual convention Friday.

Jack Hill, of the United Steelworkers of America, and Colin Gabelmann, a staff officer of the labor federation, also were named to the labor caucus slate for the party election.

Federal NDP leader Ed Broadbent told delegates the solution to the question of national unity as offered by the Liberal and Progressive Conservative parties will only increase the wealth and power of the rich and powerful provinces.

Broadbent said the party rejects an approach to federalism which would see a decentralization of power to the provinces.

He said there are those in the richer provinces who agree with the "more power to the provinces line".

"To turn medicare, hospitalization and university education back exclusively to provinces unequal in resources is the same as saying that the rich and poor in Canada have the same legal right to buy a Cadillac," he said. "It's no accident that the keys for the car are never to be found in the pockets of the poor."

The NDP leader said national programs are needed not only to ensure greater equality, but also are essential for generating a common sense of nationhood.

He told about 900 party delegates that tensions will grow in Canada without the continuance and expansion of such national programs in the future.

THE SLOWEST GUM IN THE WEST . . .

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Doug Rodbom, 12, of North Vancouver might be remembered by posterity as having the slowest gum in the west.

It all started on a dare from a buddy, but then Doug found his area of expertise had so far been overlooked by the Guinness Book of World Records.

Now he's halfway through his chosen ordeal and he's confident he'll be the first person ever to chew the same wad of gum for a full month. It comes out only for five minutes each mealtime.

Dr. Barry Cutler thinks Doug will have the strongest jaw muscles this side of a beaver dam. Dr. Michael Wainwright thinks the long chew might even reduce tooth decay because the saliva generated is a natural tooth-cleaning substance.

Foolish to Drop Controls Until Election: Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says it would be foolish to abolish wage and price controls before a general election expected next year.

His view that compulsory controls should remain in force for at least another year came in an interview in Paris a week ago. A text became available Friday in Ottawa.

Previously, the government has indicated it might start dismantling pay and profit controls as early as Oct. 14, second anniversary of the anti-inflation program.

But Trudeau now suggests controls should stay until later next year. They are due to expire legally Dec. 31, 1978.

Discussing labor-union opposition to controls in an interview last week with the Paris newspaper Le Monde, Trudeau is quoted as saying that after opinion polls showed support for controls, the unions began to get the message.

"It will be necessary to return one day to free enterprise and collective bargaining," Trudeau is quoted as saying.

"But it would be folly, in my view, to abolish controls before the general election."

Asked when that would be, Trudeau replied that "the constitution gives us another two years, and I don't want to create election fever. Let's say in principle it will take place in a year. . . ."

Trudeau did not elaborate in the interview on the need for retaining controls. But Finance Minister Donald Macdonald and others have cited the danger of setting off renewed bouts of inflation if controls are removed too early.

The government favors a gradual removal of controls in which the first companies and unions to come under controls would also be the first ones freed from the program.

There has been discussion of possible dates for the end of the program in recent months with representatives of labor, business and the provincial governments. The earliest likely date for removal is Oct. 14, the second anniversary of the program, but some influential voices have called for an extension.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald has said an earlier date is unlikely unless both labor and business agree to voluntary restraint.

Plane Flips, Woman Hurt

An RCMP spokesman at the airport said the small plane was flipped by the wind. It was taking part in a competition involving precision landing at the time of the incident.

Costly Quarter-Inch

VANCOUVER (CP) — Workmen began demolishing the 2,600-square-foot sidewall of a three-year-old warehouse in the city Friday because it encroaches a quarter-inch onto an adjoining property.

A new wall costing $10,600 is to be built on the correct side of the dividing line. Three years of negotiations failed to resolve the issue.

Warehouse building agent Abe Fehr said Friday the reconstruction cost will be paid by the original contractor, Stevenson Construction Co. Ltd.

Fehr said he runs across such minor encroachment problems about twice a year in Vancouver, and usually they are settled with a flat rental payment of under $200 for the life of the building.

"Common sense did not prevail in this case," he said. "The owner of the other property is out of the country and we were just not able to work it out through the lawyers.

Fehr said the building was constructed three years ago at a cost of $100,000.

Cold Shoulder Given Heating Checkers

VANCOUVER (CP) — A federal government make-work project for students, designed to help people save fuel, has run into a public relations problem in New Westminster and North Vancouver City.

Two teams of about 20 students each are at work in the two communities, knocking on doors and offering to analyse, for free, the heating and insulation problems of the homeowner. The program, called Project Enersave, is being carried out as a pilot project in 37 localities across Canada, and there are plans to extend it to every city and community in the country if it proves successful.

Project leaders Roger Bryenton and Ken Cooper say the problem in New Westminster and North Vancouver is that a lot of people either aren't interested in saving fuel or are suspicious of their callers.

Some people won't even open their doors, they are so wary, perhaps because of police warnings not to let anyone into their homes, Bryenton says, but access to homes is essential for a proper analysis. Students carry identification and literature describing their project.

Questionnaires that are filled in are sent to the office of energy conservation in Ottawa and are returned to the householder with recommendations, specifically fitting each home analysed, on how to improve insulation and save fuel.

The project, financed by the Manpower department, began last Monday in the two cities and is scheduled to last an additional 13 weeks. Cost of the project in each centre is estimated to be $50,000.

Ron Hutton, a spokesman for the energy conservation office in Ottawa, said he realizes public suspicion and indifference is a problem, but that the selling of the project to the community is the responsibility of local co-ordinators. He said that because the project is a make-work one for students, very little allowance is made in budgeting for advance advertising.

Prison Reform: 'Make It Unpleasant'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Economics professor Gordon Tullock of Virginia has some unusual ideas about prison reform — like small dungeons, wretched food and complete isolation for each prisoner.

"What has recently been discovered," he said "is that rough treatment deters crime. Therefore, we should stop trying to rehabilitate prisoners. We should begin making it unpleasant for them so they will not want to return to confinement."

Tullock, a recognized international expert in the economics of crime, was in Victoria for a lecture Thursday afternoon at UVic. His lecture topic was on redistribution of wealth.

In an interview, he said crime costs the United States as much as $30 billion per year, of which 75 per cent could be saved through a more effective system of detection and punishment.

More police should be hired so that more criminals would get caught. And when they go to jail, it should become a most unpleasant place.

"Three months in an unpleasant prison can have as powerful a deterent as two years in a prison as they are run now. The (cash) saving from a shorter sentence would be substantial and the deterrent value would be at least equally as strong."

It would be expensive in the short run to hire more police and to construct new prisons (so there is someplace to put all the criminals being caught).

But the expense would be short-term only.

The prison style, however, should be greatly altered.

His recommendations:

—Cells should be small and prisoners should be required to spend more time in them.

—No prisoner should be permitted to talk to another inmate while he is in prison. "This would prevent prisons from being a school for crime."

TULLOCK

—Prison diets are too attractive. Tullock said prisoners should get no meat, just vegetables. This is quite nutritional but not very tasty. "There is no reason why prison food should be delicious as long as it is nutritional," he said.

—Prisoners should be required to do some hard work each day, preferably something that is non-productive, like digging a hole and filling it in.

"I guarantee that prisoners would not be eager to return to that type of prison, even after a short sentence."

Tullock said prominent U.S. senators, including Ted Kennedy, have in recent months expressed strong reservations about the value of trying to rehabilitate people in prisons.

The prison system of California has recently been reformed and there is no mention this time of rehabilitation, Tullock said.

Tullock said the jury is still out on the question of capital punishment.

While the evidence was strong that harsher sentences deter crime, the data is mixed on the execution question. He said so few areas in North America use the death sentence that it is difficult to obtain reliable and meaningful statistics.

One U.S. study in 1974 indicated that each death sentence would deter between eight and 20 murders but other studies have produced inconclusive results.

But there is no uncertainty about the value of harsh sentences.

"One reason why the crime rate is lower in Canada than in the United States is because prison sentences tend to be longer in Canada."

However, more can be done than simply making prison sentences longer and more unpleasant.

"It would deter crime if more criminals were caught."

For example, one study showed that burglars average a cash profit of $50 per break-in. After 200 burglaries, that comes to $10,000. If he goes seven months without getting caught, which is the present average in many cities, he can earn $10,000 a year despite spending a few months in jail.

NEW secretary-treasurer of Greater Victoria School Board is Carl Warner, 41, now holding the same post with the Colchester-East Hants Amalgamated School Board in Truro, N.S. He takes over July 1, succeeding Ernest Shaw, now the Victoria school district's financial and business affairs adviser.

College Given Surprise Grant

The Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific has been left $120,000 in the will of a retired research chemist.

The bequest is the result of the late Samuel Simco, who retired in Victoria after being a researcher with the Chemcell petrochemicals company in Edmonton, hearing college director Jack Matthews outline the college's program at the University of Victoria in 1975.

Simco died Nov. 27, 1976, at the age of 67. He retired in 1969 and is described by the nurse who looked after him in his last years as "a very private person."

His nurse said Simco was deeply impressed with the students' dedication to learning, even having to learn a new language to pursue their studies, and the college's accent on more than academics.

College administrator John Davis has been informed that Simco decided to include the college in his will after he was given a tour of the college by a student.

Matthews says the bequest "came out of the blue" and Davis said it was a complete surprise when the trust company handling Simco's estate notified the college.

Davis said the money will provide scholarships for students with at least $75,000 probably being retained in a special scholarship fund. The interest from the fund will provide one scholarship a year.

"Each year a student will come here on the Samuel Simco scholarship," he said.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Boyd Stephen Windsor, 22, of Calgary, has been charged with armed robbery in the holdup of a downtown branch of the Toronto Dominion Bank Monday in which $1,146 was taken. Windsor appeared in provincial court Friday.

Glanford To Have 4 Lanes

Saanich municipal planner Gil Laurenson said today Glanford Avenue, being an arterial road, will be upgraded t four lanes, whether or not the Royal Oak industrial park is developed.

At a public meeting on the community plan this week, Royal Oak residents contended they had been assured Glanford would not become a four-lane highway.

"It's going to be an arterial, there's no doubt about it," Laurenson said today. "Anything that is built now is 32-foot . . . or four lanes. We have them in the suburbs. It (Glanford) is just that kind of commuter road and of significant importance to the highway." Glanford is one of 30 roads proposed in a truck route network for the municipality.

The Sound Of Music On Sunday

The sound of music will continue to sweep through Victoria on Sunday with a series of band concerts in Beacon Hill Park, Heritage Court alongside the Provincial Museum and elsewhere.

The Victorian Days programs in full swing, a "fun frolic" starting at 2 p.m. will provide 6½ hours of continuous stage entertainment alongside the Inner Harbor at Belleville and Government Streets.

A Sunset ceremony, May Queen procession and fireworks, scheduled to start at 8:30 Sunday evening in front of the Legislative Buildings, are among highlights for the day.

Monday is Parade Day, with the parade travelling south on Douglas from Finlayson to Humboldt and starting at 9:30 a.m. As in past years, it will include numerous American marching bands.

From 1 to 5 p.m. Monday, the Gorge Regatta will offer a mix of water sports, music, gymnastics and a beer garden. Location is Kinsmen Park, beside Tillicum Road south of Gorge Road.

A detailed list of events and activities throughout the Victoria holiday weekend and next week was published on page 43 of Wednesday's Victoria Times.

Former Deputy Appointed To $150-a-Day Position

Bill Neilson, former B.C. deputy minister of consumer services, has been appointed a member of the corporate and financial services commission.

An order-in-council, released Friday, says Neilson will serve for two years and be paid $150 a day for commission work plus travel and other expenses.

He has also been doing some consulting work for Premier Bill Bennett's office and acting as secretary to the cabinet's anti-inflation committee.

The commission is a government body set up to hear appeals from orders of the superintendent of brokers and other government decisions related to licensing.

CLINICS FALL SHORT OF TARGET

The clinics produced a total of 642 donors for the week, 212 short of the minimum objective.

Savage said it brought the total of donors for the first five months of the year to 5,501 when the goal is 6,200. Object of the week of blood clinics each month in Greater Victoria is to match the amount of blood used by local hospitals.

Final clinic this week was at Victoria high school Friday and attracted 112 donors. The target had been 150.

NO WRONGDOING OVER CONTRACT

DUNCAN — A department of municipal affairs investigation has cleared the Cowichan Valley Region District community centre committee of any wrongdoing in connection with the awarding of a multi-million-dollar contract.

In a letter to the district, investigator R. W. Long, inspector of municipalities, noted the centre committee was under no obligation to award the contract to the lowest bidder.

"It it noted that the form of tender states that the lowest or any other tender will not necessarily be accepted, and in view of this it is considered the decision of the Cowichan Valley Region Board to be final," Long stated.

The bid of Farmer Construction was $6,058,000, $15,000 higher than Grimwood Construction.

The committee made the recommendation on a guarantee from Farmer Construction that it could complete the job in 72 weeks, compared to 82 weeks quoted by the Vancouver company.

Air Search for Pair

An air search was mounted today for a helicopter with a Vancouver man and woman aboard, missing on a 132-mile flight from Dease Lake to Atlin in northern B.C.

A ferries' spokesman said today 70 foot passengers had to be left behind on the last sailing from Tswawwassen to Swartz Bay on Friday. Seven cars also failed to make the run.

The spokesman said while traffic was "quite heavy" on Friday it was moderate today.

300 Boats Due For Swiftsure

The Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca sailing classics, due to start next Saturday morning, are expected to draw more than 300 competitors.

A total of 283 entries has been received by the Royal Victoria Yacht Club and this is expected to rise when Tuesday's mail arrives. Eligible entries must be postmarked today.

The Swiftsure race is 136.2 miles out to the Swiftsure Bank and back. Smaller boats in the Juan de Fuca race will sail to Clallam Bay on the Washington side of the Strait of Juan de Fuca and back, a distance of 76.6 miles.

Lieut. K. D. Kirkwood will command the naval auxiliary vessel the boats will round in Clallam Bay.

The start line will be off the Victoria coastline in the Brotchie Ledge area. At each end of the line will be HMCS Porte Quebec, commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. Christopher Haines, and the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Countess of Port Angeles, commanded by Lieut. J. G. William Southwood.

Two RVYC pleasure cruisers, Gerry Williams' Shalimar and Bob Smith's Scot Free will help patrol the race courses.

As in past year, Frank Piddington of RVYC will be general chairman and fellow club member Sid Bryant, race committee chairman.

Faulty Outlet Cause of Fire

He estimated damage to the building at $15,000 and to contents at $10,000.

Police Altercation Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A police internal investigation is being conducted into an altercation between an undercover RCMP officer and two members of the city police force in the city's gastown area about a month ago.

The undercover policeman, playing the part of a low-level drug dealer, apparently ran across a city street April 19 in front of a motorcycle policeman.

The "dealer" was ordered to stop and one policeman said "the guy started mouthing off."

Tom Dixon, city deputy police chief, confirmed Friday the matter was under investigation but said no details could be disclosed until the investigation is completed and subjected to appeal procedures contained within the Police Act.

Dixon said the investigation will be completed within 10 days, and the two city motorcycle officers will remain on the job pending its outcome.

Shocking Plumbing Kills

RED DEER (CP) — A fault in a neighboring cabin was likely responsible for the electrocution of a 23-year-old tourist in the bathroom of a Red Deer motel last month, an electrical protection branch spokesman said Friday.

Donald Alexander Dolmage of Londesboro, Ont., was in a bathtub at the Cozy Pine Motel April 27 when he apparently received a fatal electric shock, the spokesman said. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

He was visiting the area with his bride on their honeymoon. They had been married earlier in the week, police said.

Investigators from the Red Deer electrical protection branch spent four days investigating "the very unusual circumstances" of the incident, said Bill de Gaust of the Edmonton office.

FOREST FIRE HAZARD LOW

The provincial forest service said Friday that cloudy, cool weather during the week kept the forest fire hazard in the low to moderate range through most of British Columbia.

The exception was the northeastern part of the province, where the hazard was high.

$30M Zoo Planned In Surrey

SURREY (CP) — The Tynehead Zoological Society unveiled plans Friday for a $30-million zoological park on a 640-acre tract of land in this municipality.

The proposed zoo is to provide breeding grounds and natural-habitat enclosures for several hundred wildlife species, many of them endangered.

Dr. Paul Joslin, a wildlife protection specialist hired by the society last year, said "it won't; be a zoo with bars and cages."

"We'll try to simulate the natural environment," he said. "If we're dealing with a plains animal we'll show him on the plains."

Dr. Murray Newman, director of the Vancouver Public Aquarium and a consultant biologist on the project, said the society hopes to begin construction of the first phase — a core zoo flanked by wildlife parks for Canadian and African animals — by 1979 and complete the initial facility by 1982, at a cost of $15 million.

Sealing Protest Muffled By New Law: Protester

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Brian Davies, Canada's anti-tiseal hunt advocate told a news conference at the UN on Friday that Ottawa is trying to suppress news media coverage of the annual seal hunt off Newfoundland under the guise of new laws for the 200-mile fisheries economic zone.

But Canadian government officials denied this, saying that some new laws are needed to manage the economic zone as it approaches fruition, but there is no intention of keeping out members of the media.

Davies, executive director of the International Fund for Animal Welfare based in Fredericton, N.B., told the news conference he feels the Canadian government soon will assert some kind of criminal and civil jurisdiction over the 200-mile limit.

He drew attention to proposed amendments to the Fisheries Act prohibiting the landings of an aircraft or driving a land vehicle over the ice within an area of about 200 miles from the Canadian Atlantic coast without the permission of the fisheries minister.

"That clearly is an assumption of more than just management of the fisheries resource in that area," Davies maintained.

In reply to a question, he said he believes the seal hunt issue embarrasses the Canadian government, and the proposed laws are one way of eliminating that embarrassment.

Davies made his pitch on the eve of the reopening of the Law of the Sea conference at the UN.

West Bank Collision Course

Times News Services

TEL AVIV — Menahem Begin, expected to be Israel's new prime minister, says the West Bank of the Jordan River is an integral part of Israel, setting him on a collision course with the United States.

Begin, whose rightist Likud coalition won Tuesday's parliamentary elections, told the state television Friday the West Bank, captured from Jordan in the 1967 Mideast war, is "an inseparable component of Israeli sovereignty."

The United States has urged Israel to relinquish almost all the occupied Arab territories — including the West Bank — in exchange for a peace settlement.

President Carter has also expressed support for creation of a homeland for the Palestinian people on the West Bank.

The outgoing Labor government agreed to negotiate a partial withdrawal from the West Bank, but planned to ring the territory with military outposts.

Earlier Friday, Begin said he is sending a delegation to Washington next week to explain his views to U.S. politicians and the public.

In the television interview, Begin said the Arabs have always rejected compromise, so there is no point in discussing it.

"We got it into our heads that compromise is a right policy," he said. "Now I hope we will begin to explain, after 10 years, that it isn't so, that Judea and Samaria (the West Bank) held by Israel harbors the promise of peace, that if we give it up there will be no chance for peace."

According to unofficial final election results published Friday, the Likud won 43 seats in the 120-seat Knesset (parliament). Labor was second with 32 seats and the Democratic Movement for Change was third with 15. Three religious groups captured a total of 17 seats and the rest were shared among smaller parties.

The shape of Israel's new government-to-be now appears to depend on which of two possible coalitions the Likud party will be able to form.

Paisley's Party Moves Up

BELFAST (Reuter) — Rev. Ian Paisley, the hardline Protestant leader, Friday confounded critics who forecasted that his influence in Northern Ireland politics was destroyed when his general strike collapsed this week.

As the final votes were being counted in Northern Ireland's municipal elections, it became clear that Paisley's Democratic Unionist Party had moved up to third place after taking at least 69 of the 526 seats being contested, tripling its representation on local councils.

The strike, called on May 3, was aimed at forcing the British government to take harsher measures against Republican guerrillas and to restore local Protestant majority rule. It lasted only 11 days before disintegrating.
